Crime Jackals,

By ARTHUR BRISBANE

CHICAGO, Feb. 12.

Mayor Thompson conducts what he calls "a jackass show," displaying a desert donkey with dummies representing his opponents on its back and an elephant representing the Republican party.

The Mayor intimates that the donkey knows more than both his opponents combined. Concerning the elephant he says it can go nine days without drinking, but "who wants to be an elephant?"

MAYOR THOMPSON'S opponent, Judge Lyle, is also a political impresario. To offset the desert donkey, at his meetings, he displays a collection of sawed-off shotguns, sub-machine guns, explosive bombs and other tools of the gangsters' trade. He says the gangsters want Mayor Thompson again, and fear him, Judge Lyle.

Judge Lyle, still offsetting the donkey, uses his best language. He calls Mayor Thompson "Jumbo, flood relief quack."

Dr. John L. Robertson, supporting Judge Lyle, says Chicago was "headed for vigilante and lamppost," meaning mob rule, when Judge Lyle came to the rescue.

Mayor Thompson has sued Judge Lyle for $100,000 and meanwhile the Chicago American, full of local patriotism, wishes you to know that government records concerning crime, show that Chicago stands No. 68 from the top. Outside editors are requested to stop kicking Chicago's crime dog around. Let them look to their own crime records.

Florida will be pleased to hear that the city with the lowest crime record in the United States is Tampa.

THAT CHICAGO deserves the crime reputation is partly the result of good newspaper reporting. Everything is done and told spectacularly, and never to be forgotten names are invented for the criminals.

You would never guess from Paul Block's quiet home paper published in Toledo, O., that Toledo stands first in crime percentage, according to the record, with 236.1 crimes for each 10,000 population against Chicago's 64.1 for each 10,000.

MRS. ELEANOR PATTERSON, editor of Hearst's Washington Herald, decided to interview Dr. Einstein, climbed the rocks on Samuel Untermyer's Palm Springs estate in California and found Dr. Einstein taking a sun bath with a handkerchief over his head.

She climbed down again without an interview "wondering what a regular determined go-getter she reporter would do under the circumstances."

UNDER SUCH circumstances, Nelly Bly, best American woman reporter with the possible exception of Dorothy Dix, would have got a blanket, put it over Dr. Einstein and got the interview, if necessary sitting on the blanket and Einstein to keep him from getting away.

Mrs. Patterson is a first-class reporter. Her account of Charley Chaplin's first night, with Dr. Einstein shedding big scientific tears, and Mrs. Einstein saying "Ach weh," should be read by all young reporters.

Unfortunately Mrs. Patterson has more than a million dollars income, thanks to her grandfather, Joseph Medill, who founded the Chicago Tribune, so she won't do the fine things that she might do. Few succeed in spite of wealth, the worst of all handicaps.

WHEN A LION goes hunting, jackals follow. When he has eaten his fill, they eat.

Crime develops the jackals. When a killer had finished his man and left him lying dead in an alley, in the rear of 627 South State street here, two young men, 20 and 22 years old, following the murderer, at a distance, stripped the corpse of its clothing as their share.

Detective Harold Fogarty got them and the clothing, including the shoes. A photograph shows one of the youths laughing as the clothing is held before him.

A similar advertisement published in the Chicago American a week ago produced such results that the advertisement is repeated.

"The Fair" realizes that it is not wise to whisper in a great crowd of readers, when you can afford to shout.

SUCH ADVERTISING clears shelves of goods, employs many in the selling, provides work for many more, producing goods to refill emptied shelves.

THE FAIR, like big stores in other cities, has branches in different parts of the city, giving the advertiser the full value of newspaper circulation. Maj. Namm, owner of a Brooklyn store, recently advertised on the same big scale in the New York Evening Journal. If you have the right goods, at right values, and courage to advertise aggressively, you can sell the goods.

"YOUNG" SENATOR LA FOLLETTE, who has his father's seat, also possesses his father's ability to say things in a striking fashion. Commenting on conditions hampering the farmers' right to borrow from the $45,-

OPEN INQUIRY ON BUYING INSISTED

Houston, Who Preferred Charges, Declines to Press Case Behind Closed Doors

John D. Houston, Pittsburgh wholesale grocer, who assailed the City Supply Department's method of awarding canned goods and food contracts, today denounced Mayor Kline's secret probe of the charges and said he would not appear at any sessions from which the public is excluded.

Houston was invited by the Mayor to appear along with other bidders on food stuffs for city institutions after yesterday's closed session in the office of Bertram L. Succop, director of the City Department of Supplies.

URGES PUBLICITY

After receiving the invitation, Houston said:

"I will not attend a 'star chamber' hearing into these charges under any circumstances. The matter must be made public. I have no personal ends to gain by this expose, but I want the citizens of Pittsburgh to get a fair deal and not have their money squandered.

"However, I will attend a hearing if it is held before City Council and I am given permission to question the departmental and hospital officials and examine their records in the presence of newspapermen and

MISS JANE RALSTON

MAN HELD HERE IN OHIO SLAYING

"Pittsburgh Hymie" Martin, alleged racketeer, was arrested here today for questioning in the investigation of the slaying of William E. (Rarin' Bill) Potter, ex-Cleveland councilman.

"Pittsburgh Hymie" rented the Cleveland apartment in which Potter was found shot to death several days ago, according to a Cleveland detective, who reached here today.

Martin was being questioned this afternoon by detectives regarding the slaying.

He is said to be a friend of another Pittsburgher—J. J. Radich, or Redick—who was arrested in Cleveland along with a blonde woman. Radich, said to be a former hotel clerk here, lived in the apartment building in which Potter was shot. Police say Martin has a criminal record.

Potter was slain on the eve of his trial on perjury charges resulting from lamb graft deals. One theory was that the shooting was to prevent a possible expose of the real facts of the case.

QUEEN OF MAY, ATHLETE ELOPE

Mr. Delahunty

The campus romance was disclosed with the announcement that Miss Jane Ralston, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Ralston, of 1317 Singer place, Wilkinsburg, had married Kenneth Delahunty, son of Mrs. Ellen Delahunty, of Livermore. The marriage took place January 28, at Morgantown, W. Va.

Miss Ralston, a popular member of the junior class at Westminster, is a member of Alpha Gamma Delta sorority. Delahunty, a senior, twice has been all-conference forward in basketball. Last year he was captain of the varsity track team.

Snow and Ice, Skidding Cars Snarl Traffic

Ice-coated streets today created traffic jams, as slow-moving vehicles skidded in various directions.

The glazed surface of Bigelow boulevard slowed the flow of morning traffic almost to a standstill. From Seventh avenue to Thirty-third street three lanes of inbound traffic crept into the city. Many drivers were forced to put on chains, and others, having none, abandoned their cars on the boulevard. Several minor collisions occurred.

In the South Hills district traffic was particularly slow, even though hilly thoroughfares had been cindered. A portion of Pioneer avenue, in the city, was closed to upbound traffic. Dormont traffic officers reported traffic jams, but no accidents. The slippery condition of Banksville road caused a tieup there.

Snowfall of from 3 to 5 inches in an area between Canton, O., and McConnellsburg, Pa., made roads in this section dangerous, the Pittsburgh Motor Club reported today. Heavy snowfall was reported through the Allegheny Mountains, and drifts three feet deep were formed on stretches of the William Penn Highway.

BANDITS LOOT TREASURY MAIL

Robbers Slug Truck Driver in Capital Station, Escape With Mutilated Currency

WASHINGTON, Feb. 12.—(AP.)—A daring holdup of a mail truck carrying registered pouches in the Union Station here early this morning was announced by postal officials today as netting the robbers nothing but mutilated currency.

The sacks stolen, after a mail clerk had been beaten with lead pipe, contained only old bills cut in half for shipment to the Treasury Department, which called the loot a "gold brick"—saying it was made up of only parts of bills which once had a value of $807,000.

LOOT VALUELESS

Police and government operatives were at work in many portions of the Capital and watching its outskirts in an attempt to apprehend the holdup men.

The Treasury Department said the other halves of the mutilated bills had been received here in a previous mail shipment.

The robbery occurred between 2 and 3 a. m. in the Union Station concourse. Peter Johnson, in charge of 28 sacks of registered mail being shipped from the Federal Reserve Bank in New York to the treasury, was the mail clerk bludgeoned by the robbers.

There was some mystery as to just how many men had participated. Three lead pipes were found in the station concourse. Johnson testified two men attacked him. However, a Negro who was attending the mail truck said a man coming from another direction had threatened him with what he believed was a revolver.

SAFE-CHECK SYSTEM

Officials said the custom of sending money for redemption was to cut an identification mark through it, then to cut the bill in half the long way in the bank which was returning it. The lower half of the bill then is sent to the Treasury, where it is checked and a telegram is sent to the bank that it has been received. The upper half of the notes are not sent until the bank has received the telegram verifying the receipt and check of the first shipment.

HOME BOMBED, MOTHER, CHILD IN PERIL

Hurled From Beds When Blast Rocks Dwelling of Union Cab Drivers' Agent

The wife and daughter of Fred Schaffer, business agent of the Taxicab Chauffeurs' Union, No. 433, narrowly escaped injury today when a bomb rocked their home, 139 Haberman avenue, Mt. Washington.

The explosion was heard in the vicinity at 3:30 this morning. Schaffer was attending a dance of the union in Moose Temple. His wife and his daughter, Virginia Doris, 10, asleep in a second floor bedroom, were hurtled from their beds.

Schaffer, told detectives he had received several warnings during the past week. Last Friday, he told the sleuths, he received a telephone call asking him to "sell out" the drivers' union. He refused.

Earlier, he said, he chased prowlers his daughter saw loitering near his house.

Schaffer, before the drivers' strike, was affiliated with the Green Cab Company. He was one of the organizers of the local union, and recently was unanimously re-elected business agent.

The identity of the man who telephoned Schaffer was divulged to detectives, who said they would turn their information over to Detective Inspector Frank Boyd.

The man who Schaffer said held a telephone conversation with him denied the charge today, saying that he had not seen or talked with him for more than a year.

8 ESCAPE FIRE IN PENN AVE.

Eight persons, including a baby and a child, were periled at noon today when fire damaged two two-story frame buildings housing three stores and three apartments at 6359-61-63 Penn avenue.

The blaze, of undetermined origin, started between the walls separating the stores of Pats Turo and Dominic Testa.

Turo's wife carried her baby from their upstairs apartment. Mrs. Ella Britton, and her 3-year-old daughter, Patsy Ann, who resides above the Testa store, were forced to the street, as were Mrs. Belle Jones and her daughter, Queen, 20, of 6363 Penn avenue. The Jones family lives above a vacant storeroom at that address. Damage was estimated at $1,500.

Wyoming Dry Vote Plan Passes House

CHEYENNE, Wyo., Feb. 12.—(AP.)—A resolution calling for an expression by Wyoming voters on the repeal or modification of the Eighteenth Amendment was passed in the House of Representatives by a vote of 35 to 26.

The resolution would permit a vote at the next election. A bill providing for repeal of the act creating the state law enforcement department also was passed by the House today. It now goes to the Senate.

Pershing Offers Aid to Allies

With the British driven back 37 miles at the beginning of the great German offensive and the French worried over the fate of Paris, Gen. John J. Pershing promptly placed the entire resources of the A. E. F. at the disposal of the Allies. This he reveals in today's installment of his memoirs, adding another chapter to the hitherto unwritten history of the World War.

Hearst Radio Plays Major Part in Bringing Pope's Message to World

By E. J. GOUGH,
Director Hearst Newspaper Radio Service.

NEW YORK, Feb. 12.—(Universal.)—High members of the Catholic hierarchy and laity and broadcasting executives today expressed praise and thanks to the Hearst newspaper radio service for the vital part played by it in the arrangements for His Holiness Pope Pius XI to speak in person to the millions of his flock in the United States.

Broadcasters, in their expressions of thanks, revealed that it was due to efforts of Hearst radio service that the first radio message of the Pontiff was made available to all the stations of the world. One chain endeavored to obtain exclusive rebroadcast rights. Recognizing that if the broadcast were limited to any one group of stations, millions of listeners would be deprived of the opportunity to hear the most eagerly awaited program in broadcast history, Prince Valerio Pignatelli, acting for Hearst radio service, made representations to the Vatican which caused broad-

PIUS URGES RESPECT FOR ALL LAWS

Pontiff's Voice Broadcast Twice Throughout Earth In History Making Event

Respect for All Nations Asked

NEW YORK, Feb. 12.—(AP.)—The faithful were directed to obey their pastors and the governed were instructed to have respect for their governments by Pope Pius XI in his radio address opening Station HVJ at the Vatican City today.

The Pope spoke as "the pastor of souls of the universe" and addressed himself "to the world categorically."

In the order named he directed his remarks to bishops, priests, the faithful, missionaries, governors of nations, the governed, workers, poor and sick.

He asked each to consider his own position and exhorted the faithful especially to obey their pastors.

Workmen should labor with conscientiousness, the Holy Father said. He prayed that the infirm might enjoy health again, and closed his first radio address with a benediction.

VATICAN CITY, Feb. 12.—From the shadow of the ancient Vatican, the voice of the Pope went on the air twice within an hour today, bridging the ages, continents and seas, as for the first time in history a Supreme Pontiff of the Roman Catholic Church spoke to the world through the medium of the radio.

The first occasion was the inauguration of the Vatican City wireless station, at which Pope Pius XI addressed a papal benediction to all creeds, classes and faiths throughout the world.

With the world brought simultaneously to the great bronze doors of Vatican City by means of powerful broadcasting apparatus and equally sensitive microphones, the voice of His Holiness was projected through the ether over limitless expanses, spanning continents and oceans and carrying the solemn pronouncements of the Pontiff into countless millions of homes throughout Christiandom.

The setting for this unparalleled event was simplicity itself, and the events preceding it were marked to a large extent by absence of the pomp and panoply of Vatican affairs.

Wearing a flowing red cloak and the crimson hat of a prince of the church, the Pope motored from the Vatican palace to the broadcasting station in his specially-built automobile, in which a scarlet and gold throne-chair occupies the entire tonneau.

ARRIVES AT STATION

Princess Helen, Carol's Ex-Wife, May Wed Again

VIENNA, Feb. 12.—(INS.)—Another marriage for Princess Helen, divorced wife of King Carol II of Rumania, is in the offing, according to unconfirmed rumors current in Rumanian society circles here today.

The rumors named Col. Skeletti, of the Rumanian army, as Helen's next husband.

Princess Helen has been adamant in her refusal to consent to a reconciliation with Carol, who was anxious to patch up his matrimonial difficulties. Advices from Bucharest report Helen has written to the King, informing him once again she is determined to reject any attempts to nullify the divorce granted her while Carol was living in exile.

It was understood here that Princess Helen is suffering from grip at her palace in Bucharest. When and where the reported marriage is to take place could not ascertained.

Veteran Politicians Wonder Where Puzzling Situation In Pinchot Quiz Will End

By E. W. PRENDERGAST
Staff Correspondent.

HARRISBURG, Feb. 12.—Gov. Gifford Pinchot worked at his office today, while all but a few of the thousands of state employes observed Lincoln's birthday otherwise.

In another wing of the Capitol Senator William H. Earnest, head of the Senate investigation committee, looked hopefully for letters or information to be put before his first hearing Monday.

Engaging the Governor's attention were many of the 1,200 complaints against the utilities and the letter of William S. Lee, president of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers, which told the Governor that he feared he was misinformed on electrical distribution.

Patronage road administration legislation, but principally the Public Service Commission and utility probe, actual sessions of which will begin next Monday afternoon—occupied the day.

POLITICAL PUZZLE

Trying to solve the most complex political mix-up in the capitol here in many years, veteran leaders were wondering where it would end. John Collins, state Democratic chairman, and John Hemphill, defeated Democratic and Liberal candidate for governor against Pinchot, left Harrisburg after spending the early part of the week here.

The strange circumstance of the four senators and 20 House members of the Democratic party splitting evenly over the public utilities probe was laid at the door of Collins. Democrats blamed him for organizing a bolt against the Pinchot policies.

Some Republicans wondered, admitting that the national Democratic party, particularly Senator Thomas J. Walsh was pointing the way to a curb of the political and other activities of the power interests.

VOTE SURPRISES

More amazing to them, however, was the vote of the two Socialist members of the House, who voted against the administration. Had they the Democratic votes in the Senate, the Pinchot forces would have gained a tie and possibly a victory. They got only two.

Gov. Pinchot yesterday explained his road program to supervisors from every county in the state, who convened here. Under his plan 20,000 miles of country road would be taken over, maintained and eventually surfaced by the state.

It was learned that with a 25 per cent pro-rata for the counties Allegheny's share will be 420 miles. Some of this, however, the county wishes to retain. A meeting of the Allegheny commissioners, planning commission and county road heads will be held in Pittsburgh soon to agree. They point out that some roads carry too heavy traffic to be included in the Pinchot plan. Westmoreland County will get the biggest share in the state, about 580 miles. Beaver County, 260; Washington, 450 or more, and Cambria, 262.

RICHEY BOOSTED

Friends of Mat C. B. Shaffer of Pittsburgh are sponsoring him for chief engineer of the highways department. Samuel Eckels, a Pittsburgher, is a holdover from the Fisher term. Shaffer is prominent in veteran organizations and was state president of the reserve officers' association.

Congressman Clyde Kelly of Braddock and John Frankel of Pittsburgh saw the governor yesterday in connection with patronage. With Kelly was J. B. Richey, superintendent of McKeesport schools, whom it was understood both Kelly and Senator William D. Mansfield are indorsing as state head of education. This office so far is unfilled.

Uniontown Families Flee Fire Into Storm

UNIONTOWN, Feb. 12. Members of six families were driven out into a heavy snowstorm in their night clothing early this morning when the three-story frame apartment house on Beeson avenue was damaged by flames. A fire spread to the Hankins & Paulson warehouse.

The blaze is believed to have originated from an explosion, the cause of which was not determined. The noise awakened the six families.

Ina Claire Tells About 'Perfect' Gilbert Union

CHICAGO, Feb. 12.—(AP.)—Ina Claire, stage and screen star, during a brief stop over on her way from New York to Hollywood explained to reporters how she and her husband, John Gilbert movie actor, are working out their perfect experiment. She said:

"Each marriage is an individual affair with different hazards and stumbling blocks. To preserve the marriage, the two persons involved must use their heads and figure out what is best for them, not follow custom."

Soon after their marriage, Miss Claire said, she and Gilbert agreed their happiness could be better preserved by living in different establishments. She admitted this was impossible financially in many families, but said it worked admirably in her own case, adding:

"In the average marital abode the wife must stumble now and then over her husband's shaving mug. The husband is continually being disillusioned by arrays of cosmetics and the evidence of his wife's need to be beautified. The way I try to live, my makeup is always in place when my husband comes to see me. We can adjust our visits to our own moods and always see each other at our best."

any taxpayers who might want to be present."

Most of the food dealers asked to appear at the hearing tomorrow will be present, a survey disclosed at noon today. Only two said they were undecided. Several said they knew of no reason why they should refuse the Mayor's request. One said he thought a public hearing was not necessary.

SPLIT ORDER CHARGED

It was declared yesterday that Director Succop last fall had split more than $10,000 worth of canned goods contracts into parcels of less than $500 to eliminate the necessity of advertising for bids. It is imperative by law that bids be asked for contracts of $500 or more. The entire award for the split orders went to the L. H. Parke Company, of Philadelphia.

Invoices on the items for which payment was made are marked "See letter to controller." The letter explains Succop already had bought the goods. It is simply a notification to the controller that the supplies had been bought. In the letter Succop said he was sending the controller a copy of the letter to the Parke company confirming the order for the $10,000 worth of canned goods.

The hearing opened yesterday by the Mayor was the upshot of charges that Succop had shown favoritism to the Parke Company, in awarding it contracts over local bidders, although the Parke bids were much higher.

WRITERS EXCLUDED

After the "star chamber" session Mayor Kline smiled at newspapermen, who had been excluded from the proceedings, and said:

"We have decided that we'll invite Mr. Houston and all the other bidders on the contracts to the probe Friday. There we'll be able, no doubt, to determine just what is back of the whole thing. At the same time Mr. Houston will be better able to tell us just how true or false his accusations against Director Succop are."

Dr. James P. Kerr, city controller, has been co-operating with the mayor in his inquiry.

MAYVIEW HEAD PRESENT

Among those who conferred with the Mayor and Succop were Dr. J. S. Hammers, superintendent of the City Home and Hospital at Mayview; P. J. McDonough, chief examiner for the Department of Public Welfare; John Lang, chief clerk in Succop's office; Mrs. Marcella Nowe, cook at Mayview; Mrs. Pearl Clark, dietician at the institution and Paul Kydd, member of the Pittsburgh Governmental Research Bureau.

After Kerr left Succop's office he told newspapermen:

"Mr. Kydd came with us at the invitation of the Mayor and myself. We wanted him to look over the method used in keeping the books, files and records of the Supplies Department, with the thought that if the system is in bad shape, the department can be pulled out of a 'rut.' There will be no covering up. If there is anything wrong we are going to find it."

HELPED INSTALL FILES

Kydd, it was recalled, helped to install the new file and index system in the Bureau of Water and controller's office. Kerr feels, he indicated, that such a system could be used in all departments at the City-County Building.

Kerr was then asked:

"Did Mr. Kydd find anything wrong with the department's and Mr. Succop's records?"

He replied:

"All that will come out later."

Kydd would not be quoted on what took place in the meeting, but said the research bureau had been organized by Pittsburgh business men, is interested in systems of accounting and standards, and had been co-operating with the controller's office.

Secrecy clouded the activities of everyone in the "star chamber" session. Dr. Hammers had nothing to say. Neither had Succop.

NATION HONORS LINCOLN ON BIRTHDAY

Japanese Ambassador Pays Tribute at Springfield, Asks Return to His Ideals

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Feb. 12.—(AP.)—One hundred twenty-two years ago today a boy was born in the backwoods of Kentucky. No particular imporantce was attached to his coming, but today, the anniversary of his birth, an entire nation paid tribute to the memory of the most famous backwoods rail splitter of them all.

In the schools, memorial halls, and other places throughout the length and breadth of the country, Americans talked again of "Honest Abe," and listened as others extolled the virtues of America's Civil War President.

Springfield, focal point for exercises honoring Abraham Lincoln's memory because he lies buried here, heard him described as a world figure who had "taught lessons which mankind, whether East or West, must take to heart."

The speaker was Katsuji Debuchi, the Japanese ambassador, who pleaded last night for a return to the ideals of Abraham Lincoln.

President Hoover will mark today's observance of Lincoln's Birthday with an evening radio address which is to be heard by Republican organizations all over the country.

The President's address this evening at 10 o'clock will be delivered from the study in the White House which Lincoln used. It is a favorite room of Mr. Hoover, who often occupies the worn leather chair in which Lincoln pondered the grave problems of his day.

A score or more Cabinet members, government officials, party leaders, Senators and Representatives will address local rallies this evening in various cities, their talks immediately preceding the address by President Hoover. Senator David A. Reed of Pennsylvania, will speak at Meadville, Pa.

LANG OBSERVES LINCOLN RITE

Harry Washington, messenger in Director Lang's office, made the rounds of the City-County Building, distributing white carnations to each official and employe in memory of Lincoln's birthday.

Lang said:

"The custom was started years ago by Mr. Morrow, firm admirer of President Lincoln. When he died I decided to continue the observance as an annual event, both to perpetuate Mr. Morrow's memory, as well as that of Lincoln."

SCHOOLS HERE HONOR LINCOLN

In almost all public schools today the birthday of Abraham Lincoln was being observed with appropriate programs. Tonight at Webster Hall Rabbi Samuel Goldenson will address the principals of public schools at the annual Lincoln Birthday dinner.

The annual dinner of the Veteran Guard of Allegheny County, commemorating the birth of Abraham Lincoln, will be held tonight in Soldiers and Sailors Memorial Hall under the auspices of the Federated Patriotic Orders and the Grand Army of the Republic.

Lincoln's Death Recalled By Retired Miner Here

As the nation observes the anniversary of the birth of Abraham Lincoln today, Jacob J. Soles, now a retired coal digger, but in years gone by a proud member of Thompson's Battery C, in his home on the Greensburg pike, Versailles Township, vividly recalls the death of the President.

Mr. Soles Lighting Up

Today Soles is the only remaining one of four comrades-at-arms who carried the wounded Lincoln from the balcony box at Ford's Theater to his death bed in the Peterson House across the street.

Soles with his three companions on leave Good Friday night, April 14, 1865, were in the dress circle of the theater when they heard the shot and a woman's scream coming from the state box.

The four soldiers rushed to the box, and saw their commander-in-chief wounded and unconscious. Army officers ordered them to carry Lincoln from the theater. They did. They were not permitted to linger at the death bed; so they returned to their camp.

Mr. Soles makes his home with his daughter, Mrs. Laura Leffler, one of three of his surviving children. After the war he returned to coal digging, and lost an eye several years ago. He retired eight years ago.

Weather Conditions.

High pressure covers the southeastern states and the Northwest, with separate relatively low pressure areas extending from Ontario southward over the central plains to Arizona. This distribution is causing cold weather over the southeastern states, with freezing temperatures reported from the Ohio Valley and Rocky Mountain states. Temperature changes are generally over the eastern states and the Pacific coast, with rain over the middle Atlantic states, and snow over the upper lake region, where light frost occurred this morning.

VOLSTEAD FAILS TO RALLY

ST. PAUL, Minn., Feb. 12.—(INS.)—The condition of Andrew J. Volstead, former Congressman and author of the Volstead dry law, remained critical today, according to physicians.

Volstead failed to rally from an emergency operation for appendicitis performed last Friday. His condition is made more precarious by a weak heart, doctors said.

Amos W. Woodcock, National prohibition director, following a brief visit at Volstead's bedside, said:

Saxonburg Woman Killed by Auto

BUTLER, Pa., Feb. 12.—Mrs. Ella Cruickshank, 67, of Saxonburg, R. D. No. 2, was killed today when she was struck by an automobile on KDKA boulevard. She stepped in front of the car driven by Elmer Goepfert, of New Cabot. Goepfert skidded into a field, but escaped injury.

Autopsy Ordered In Death Mystery

HAVANA, Feb. 12.—(AP.)—An autopsy was to be held today in an effort to solve the death of Charles E. Gell, of San Francisco, whose bruised and lacerated body was found floating in the gulf off Vevada, a Havana suburb, yesterday. He came here January 25 and was registered at a hotel.

HYDE'S VIEW ON RELIEF WAITED

Agriculture Head Expected To Confirm Hoover Pledge On Use of Loans for Food

International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 12.—Hoping to avert a legislative deadlock in the dying Congress, administration leaders today were expecting a favorable reply from Secretary of Agriculture Arthur M. Hyde to the Senate's inquiry whether funds from the $20,000,000 compromise federal drought relief bill can be used to buy food, clothing and medicine. It was believed he had communicated his attitude to Secretary Hyde, who is in Kentucky.

BORAH ASKS QUIZ

The interrogation of Hyde was sponsored in a resolution by Senator Borah, of Idaho. It caught administration leaders by surprise and when it was adopted by an overwhelming vote, they abandoned a proposed night session and adjourned the Senate to await the reply.

During the night, there were a constant series of conferences between the President and his advisers. Administration senators virtually wore a path to the White House, urging the President to agree to an explanation that would grant the use of money for the purchase of food, clothing and medicine.

POWER MAGNATE NAMED

The insurgent opposition to the compromise was based chiefly on its alleged "indefiniteness," aided by Senator Blaine's charge that Harvey C. Couch, a utility and power magnate, of Arkansas, had negotiated it. Blaine read a newspaper story crediting Couch "with negotiating in Washington the drought relief compromise." He demanded that debate be halted until the lobby committee could investigate "this charge of lobbying."

Blaine read a long list of the negotiator's connections with Arkansas, Mississippi and Louisiana power companies, and banking interests in New York and Arkansas.

Dancer Arrested In $60,000 Theft

VERSAILLES, France, Feb. 12.—(INS.)—Emilia Terbeck, formerly a dancer at Les Ambassadeurs, famous Parisian restaurant, was arraigned before a magistrate here today on the complaint of Richard Wall, of New York, who charged her with the theft of a valise containing $60,000 in valuables from a roadhouse at Bougival, near Paris.

Miss Terbeck, who said her home was in Newark, N. J., admitted taking the valise, but declared it was only to obtain her passport and others papers "which Wall refused to surrender."

Coolidge Credits Lincoln Greatness to Conscience

NEW YORK, N. Y., Feb. 12.

To the Editor of the Sun-Telegraph:

Nearly a century and a quarter has passed since Abraham Lincoln was born. No other man in our history has so touched the heart of the people. In him they saw a reflection of themselves. They knew he sympathized with their sorrows and understood their aspirations. He surpassed all others in those attributes which men feel are common to them all. In him they find the pure and unmixed basic elements.

Calvin Coolidge

It is necessary to look beyond his intellect, profound as that became, for the true source of his greatness. He was endowed above most mortals with conscience. A compelling sense of obligation held him. An all-embracing intellectual honesty saved him from deceiving himself. From that source he derived the unsurpassed power to express his thought in clear and simple terms. In him also was a faith that moved mountains. He declared that right makes its own might and he dared to act accordingly.

Not only because he was the leader of those who saved the union, but because of the man himself, his humanity, his sincerity, his devotion, the whole nation joins in observing his birthday and the whole world looks on him as a friend.

CALVIN COOLIDGE.

"To all creation:

"We, being through the high design of God, successors of the prince of the Apostles of Him that in Whose doctrine and preaching is destined through divine command for all peoples and for every creature, and being able for the first time to avail ourselves of Marconi's admirable invention here, we speak first to all things and to all men, speaking to them here and as follows with the words themselves of Holy Scripture:

"'Hear, oh heavens, that which I shall say, and listen, oh earth, to the words of my mouth.

"'Listen all people, lend your ear all you who inhabit the globe, united toward the same end. Both the rich and the poor. Hear, os islands, and listen oh distant peoples.'"

MESSAGE OF PEACE

"To God—and let this be our first word—glory to God on high and peace on earth to men of good will.

"Glory to God who gives in our days such power to men of making their words arrive even to the confines of the earth: And peace on earth where we are representatives of that divine Jesus, the Redeemer, Whose coming announced peace, peace to the far and peace to the near, pacifying in the blood of the cross both the things that are on earth as well as those in the skies.

"To Catholics—In speaking then to men, the Apostle commands us to do good to all, but especially to the servants of the faith. We must, therefore, address our first words to them, to all those, who, making part of the family and fold of the Lord, which is the Catholic Church, call us with the sweet name of Father. To fathers and to sons we speak, to the sheep and to the lambs, to all those whom the shepherd and Supreme King Jesus Christ has confided to us in order to nourish them and guide them.

SPEAKS TO HIERARCHY

"To the heirarchy—You, we say, our brethren, cardinals of the Holy Roman Church, patriarchs, archbishops, bishops, prelates and priests, distributed in the different grades of the hierarchy, the principal object of our daily talks and at the same time the auxiliaries and partakers of our labors: We pray and beg that each of you remain faithful to that vocation in which he was called, and that each one of you walk worthily of the vocation to which you have been called.

"Nourish the flock of God which is amongst you, forming with all your heart your flock so that when the Prince of Shepherds appears you will receive the incorruptable crown of glory.

"Meanwhile the God of peace who had resurrected from death the Great Pastor of the sheep in the blood of the eternal testament, our Lord, Jesus Christ, guides you toward every good so that you may fulfil His will, accomplishing in yourself that which will be pleasing in His sight by means of Jesus Christ.

PRAISE FOR RELIGIOUS

"To the religious—and now we speak to you, oh sons and daughters of our predelection who, emulating the best examples and seconding not only the precepts but also the desires and counsels of the Divine King and his spouse, in fidelity to your most holy vows and in the religious discipline of all your life, perfume with virgin fragrance the church of God, illuminate it with your contemplations, uphold it with prayers, enrich it with science and doctrine, cultivate and enlarge ever so much more with your ministry of the word and with the works of the apostolate.

"Partakers therefore in one vocation truly heavenly and angelic, so much more precious is the treasure that you bring as the greater degree of diligence you use in conserving it, not only to render certain your vocation and election but also because the heart of the king and of your spouse might find in you, as in servants completely faithful and devoted, some consolation and reparation for the infinite offenses and negligences with which men return His ineffable love.

"To missionaries—now our words turn toward you, oh sons and daughters very dear in Christ, who in the missions pray and work to propagate the holy faith of Jesus Christ and to extend His kingdom. Like the first apostles of the church you also, in perils, necessities and tribulations, create with great patience an example for all.

"Like them you also are the 'glory of God;' you who in labors, often in chains and in blood, fighting even unto death the good and great battle of faith and of suffering, and confessing generously your faith, gain your souls and sow the seed of future Christians.

HEART WITH FAITHFUL

"We salute you, oh strong soldiers of Christ. But together with you we salute the native priests and good catechists, principal fruits and now colleagues and helpers of your labors.

"To all faithful—our heart turns toward you, to all who are faithful citizens of our episcopal city and of all the world; toward you especially who, like the first believers, the men and women of whom the apostle makes high praise, even though belonging to the laity, in the apostolate collaborate with us and with our venerable brothers, the bishops, and with the priests, to you, oh people of God and sheep of his pasture, you elect of the race, regal priesthood, holy nation, people gained by God.

GLORY FOR GOD

"Let your modesty, so well known to all men, and all that which is true, all that which is pure, all that which is just, all that which is saintly, all that which is loveable and of good fame, every virtue and every laudable discipline, form the objectt of your thoughts and be your works so that God may be glorified in everything and in everyone.

"To infidels and dissidents—also to you our thoughts and

PAPAL BLESSING GIVEN WORLD

VATICAN CITY, Feb. 12.—(INS.)—The pontifical blessing to all the world which was broadcast from the Vatican City radio station was translated into French, Spanish, Italian, Portuguese and English as follows:

"Through the medium of wireless telephony, the Holy Father has been able to be heard throughout the world. He has addressed his ecclesiastical and religious orders, missionaries, all faithful, all separated brethren, the rich and poor, workers and employers, the afflicted and suffering. He has wished the peace of Christ to all and has given his blessing to the whole world."

Pope's Words Reach Here With Amazing Clarity

Unusually clear and distinct after their journey of thousands of miles over land and sea, the Latin words of His Holiness, Pope Pius XI, came into Pittsburgh this morning with the volume of a local broadcast.

It was one of the longest point to point broadcasts on record. Atmospheric conditions aver the Atlantic Ocean were near perfect and the new Marconi station in the Vatican City operated with a clear modulation, with the exception of an occasional high power "whistle."

Once before Rome had been on the air in America—New Year's Day, when Mussolini spoke over 3RO, a government station.

National Broadcasting Company and Columbia Broadcasting System picked up HVJ short wave signals in New York and transmitted them by land wire to WCAE and WJAS in Pittsburgh.

KDKA picked up HVJ direct by way of its short wave listening post on the Duffy farm, near Wilkinsburg. By virtue of this asset and keen engineering, KDKA was on the air with its broadcast direct from Rome, 15 minutes before the networks.

Practically every radio in Allegheny County was tuned in for the Pope's broadcast. In parochial schools of the Pittsburgh Catholic Diocese the children were assembled in the auditoriums, and in many of the public schools arrangements had been made for the pupils to listen to the epochal event.

Democratic Policy Scored as Anti-Dry

KENBRIDGE, Va., Feb. 12.—(AP.)—Thomas W. Ozlin, vice chairman of the Virginia Democratic party, in a formal statement today asserted national Democratic leaders and officials apparently have a single idea and aim in view—destruction of the present system of prohibition—and warned that if they persist it is incumbent upon the states of the South and Middle West to organize to "prevent this folly."

Mr. Ozlin emphasized that he was speaking as an individual.

Denies Money Was Motive in Slaying

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 12.—(AP.)—Flat denial that any money motive inspired him to kill his brother-in-law, William F. Prophet, was made on the witness stand today by Harold E. Williams, jointly charged with murder in the first degree with his sister, Clara Grace Prophet.

This was made in the face of his confession, read at the second day of the trial yesterday, in which the confession said he had a two-fold motive in killing the brother-in-law—need of money and a desire to free his sister from an unhappy marriage.

POPE'S ADDRESS HEARD CLEARLY

NEW YORK, Feb. 12.—(AP.)—Both radio addresses today of Pope Pius XI, the first in Latin, and the second in Italian, came with remarkable clarity to American listeners gathered before radio sets in their homes, in churches, and in the streets.

From beginning to end of the program, which was on the air for more than two hours, reception was ideal except for a heterodyne whistle which came in at the time of the Pope's talk in dedicating the new HVJ transmitter. Static was absent, and fading was of such a type as to be barely noticeable.

Broadcast engineers explained that the heterodyne was caused by another station which was transmitting on almost the same wave-length as HVJ. They said that it apparently was close by, but they were unable to say whether it was a domestic or foreign station.

Norris Asks Probe Of Cement Industry

WASHINGTON, Feb. 12.—(AP.)—Senator Norris (Rep.), of Nebraska, introduced a resolution today for a Federal Trade Commission investigation of the cement industry, with a view to determining if any price agreements exist in violation of the anti-trust laws.

Father Coakley Radios Pope's Talk in English

The Rev. Dr. Thomas F. Coakley, pastor of Sacred Heart Church was the first priest to speak over the radio. He made an address from KDKA, the pioneer broadcasting station, here in January, 1921. Later the churchman, in a magazine article, predicted that at some future time the voice of the Pope would be heard around the world.

Father Coakley, co-operating with the Sun-Telegraph, at 12:15 p. m. over KDKA broadcast a translation of the Pope's address, the first translation to be given in this district. The pastor of Sacred Heart congregation took shorthand notes of the Pope's address. The Pontiff spoke between 140 and 200 words a minute.

Father Coakley said:

"The reason for the Pope speaking in Latin is that it is the traditional tongue of the church, and nearest to a universal language. It was the only way that the Pope could be understood by so large a number of listeners. Catholic priests all over the world, to say nothing of scholarly laymen, listened to and were able to understand the Pope's speech today, as they could not have done had he spoken in any other language."

An English translation of Pope Pius' speech, furnished by the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph, was read over Stations WJAS and KQV this afternoon.

World Hears Pope Speak Over Radio for First Time in History

hat. In a one-piece garment of white, upon which his sash of gold and papal crucifix seemed raised in sharp relief, he stood while the brief preliminaries were gone through. Be-spectacled as usual, the Pope wore on his head a snow-white "Zuchette," a flat-bound cap which covered only the back of his head.

The proceedings opened with the unveiling of a marble tablet commemorating the event. Inscribed in Latin, the tablet read:

"Pius Eleventh Maximus, after founding the Vatican City, according to the Lateran treaty, munificently built this station, enabling him to make heard as far as the farthest boundaries of the earth the voice of the Supreme Shepherd to the glory of Christ, King of Souls."

The tablet, situated just inside the entrance of the broadcasting station, paid tribute to Senator Guglielmo Marconi, inventor of the wireless, who also supervised the broadcast, and closed with the notation that the inauguration took place upon the ninth anniversary of the coronation of Pius XI.

When this brief ceremony was over, a signal was flashed to the trumpeters of the Vatican, who were assembled nearby, and a silver fanfare was blown, carrying to the furthermost reaches of the world the musical word that His Holiness was about to begin his speech.

The microphone first was turned over to Senator Marconi, who speaking in English and Italian delivered an introductory address.

The Pope then stepped into the microphone room, a small chamber only 10 feet by 9, most of its available space being occupied by the broadcasting apparatus. Two or three dignitaries ranged themselves behind the Pontiff as he began, while throughout the station utmost silence reigned.

SPEAKS SLOWLY

Speaking slowly and in a voice of great clarity and dignity, the Pope delivered his brief inaugural address in the ancient tongue of the church. From the wireless towers of Vatican City, the Pope's Latin at once bridged the ages, continents and seas. For the first time, a Pontiff spoke to the masses, embracing all creeds, classes and nationalities in one gigantic "audience."

For weeks the Vatican station, known by the call letters HVJ (Holy See-Vatican-Jesus) had been preparing for this epochal event. The finest scientific minds in Italy, headed by Senator Marconi himself, had labored unceasingly to insure complete success of this latest alliance between science and the church.

MARCONI SPEAKS

After His Holiness had pressed the button which put the station in operation, Senator Marconi addressed the world, speaking in Italian. He then translated his speech into English.

Marconi said:

"Hello, Hello—

"It is my very great honor and privilege to announce to you that within a very few moments, the Supreme Pontiff, His Holiness Pius XI, will inaugurate the radio station of the state of Vatican City.

"For nearly 20 centuries the Roman Pontiffs have given their inspired messages to all people, but this is the first time in history that the living voice of the Pope will have been heard simultaneously in all parts of the globe.

"With the help of Almighty God, who places such mysterious forces of nature at mankind's disposal, I have been able to prepare this instrument that will give to the faithful throughout the world the consolation of hearing the words of the Holy Father.

"Holy father, I have today the happiness of consigning to Your Holiness the work now consummated. Its completion is now consecrated by your august message. Be pleased, Holy Father, I pray you, to let your voice be heard all over the world."

The Pope then spoke.

SPEECH ENDS AT 11:02

The Pope stopped talking at 5:02 Rome time (11:02 a. m. Pittsburgh time). The Vatican City announcer then said that the Pope was immediately escorted from the radio station to his automobile to proceed to the academy of Science, where other speeches were to be made, and the broadcast resumed.

Father Gianfranceschi, president of the Papal Academy of Science, opened the proceedings there, speaking in Italian. He began his speech at 11:27 a. m., eastern standard time.

Senator Marconi followed Father Gianfranceschi at the microphone, speaking in Italian, and thanking the Pope for the honor of constructing the Vatican wireless station and members of the Papal Academy of Science for electing him to membership.

The Pope then spoke again. His second address began at 11:34, eastern standard time. This time the Pope spoke in Italian.

The Pope spoke for about 10 minutes.

Hearst Service Won Pope to Radio

cast rights to be thrown open to all. The largest number of stations ever to participate in a broadcast joined the hookup.

YEARS OF EFFORT

The world broadcast of the voice of the Pontiff from Station HVJ represents the consummation of years of effort on the part of executives of Hearst Radio Service who had the whole-hearted cooperation of distinguished personalities in the Catholic church and officials of broadcasting companies. The broadcast is the crowning achievement in the extensive program of the Hearst Newspapers to bring to the American people by radio the outstanding figures and events of the world. Long before international broadcasts had become an established practice the Hearst Radio Service visualized the radio as a new and effective means of cementing the bonds of understanding and friendship between the nations of the earth.

His Holiness the Pope was first approached through the late Cardinal Gasparri by the Hearst radio service. Initial efforts were directed toward getting Pius XI to approve a broadcast of one of the ceremonies at which he officiated. At that time there seemed to be no hope of arranging for the Pontiff to appear directly before the microphone with a special message to the world. The Pontiff is one of the most progressive in the history of the church but radio was something the Vatican had never taken into consideration. There was, in the minds of the Vatican officials, grave doubt as to whether it was compatible with the dignity of the Papacy for a Pope to broadcast.

HIERARCHY CANVASSED

First efforts of the Hearst papers to obtain his approval made it plain he was unwilling to consent to any plan for a broadcast as long as there might be any division of opinion on the subject. Many influential members of the church were reluctant to express themselves. The Hearst radio service canvassed the opinion of the hierarchy and important members of the laity to obtain support for its project and found there was the greatest of interest in the possibility of the Pontiff speaking direct to his flock in the United States.

E. J. Gough and Clark Kinnaird of Hearst newspapers radio service, W. G. H. Finch, chief radio engineer of the Hearst newspapers and Prince Valerio Pignatelli, Rome and Vatican City correspondent of the Hearst newspapers, devoted years of careful preparation to the project for a broadcast from the Vatican before it appeared there was a chance of success. In their efforts they particularly had the sympathy and encouragement of Patrick Cardinal Hayes, archbishop of New York and other high members of the hierarchy.

Pope Pius' victorious settlement of the historic dispute between the Vatican and the Italian government and the organization of a papal state spurred the efforts of the Hearst newspapers to link the Vatican with the world by radio.

YEAR OLD PLANS

A world-wide address by the Pope first appeared to be a definite possibility in February, 1930, when Mr. Finch, chief radio engineer of the Hearst newspapers, worked out a plan for the broadcast to be made by means of telephone. Engineers of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company decided at the time that this was not feasible due to inadequate facilities, but Mr. Finch was able to solve the company's mechanical difficulties and in the same month it was proposed to the Vatican by Hearst radio service that the Holy Father give a papal blessing to the world on Easter Sunday.

The plan was to install a microphone in the papal apartments and transmit the Pontiff's words from Vatican City to London by land circuits, thence via radio across the Atlantic to New York where it would be picked up and broadcast by long wave to the rest of the United States and Canada and rebroadcast by short wave to the rest of the world. The idea was kindly considered at the Vatican but finally disapproved.

The Hearst organization resumed its negotiations with new vigor when Senator Guglielmo Marconi, pioneer of wireless, announced the donation of a powerful radio station to the Vatican City. As the long-time efforts of the Hearst newspapers to arrange a broadcast by the Pope from the Vatican in advancement of its campaign for world peace became generally known, hundreds of commendatory cables and letters were sent by members of the hierarchy and laity of the church in the United States to high officials at the Vatican.

PITTSBURGH MAN JOINS

These came from such men as J. Wiseman MacDonald, president St. Vincent De Paul Society, Los Angeles; the Rt. Rev. John C. Cantwell, bishop of Los Angeles and San Diego; P. H. O'Neil, Knight of St. Gregory, Los Angeles; Joseph Scott, Knight of St. Gregory, Los Angeles; Frank G. Balfour, district deputy, Knights of Columbus, San Francisco; Joseph P. Timulty, noted Washington lawyer and secretary to the President in the Wilson administration; D. J. Callahan, supreme treasurer, Knights of Columbus, Washington; P. J. Halligan, K. S. S., Washington; Frank J. Barry, master of fourth degree Knights of Columbus, San Francisco; Henry Cook, grand knight, Knights of Columbus, Milwaukee; William George Bruce, Knight of St. Gregory, and one of Wisconsin's most influential laymen, Milwaukee; Leo G. Griffith, Knights of Columbus leader, Pittsburgh.

Mr. Griffith

The work of Prince Pignatelli, the Vatican City correspondent of the Hearst newspapers, in behalf of a papal broadcast, was recognized when the Holy Father finally decided to speak before the microphone at the ceremonies attendant to the opening of the Vatican station. First announcement of the impending broadcast was made in the Hearst newspapers.

With the papal broadcast assured, the Hearst newspapers put their facilities for further cooperation at the disposal of Senator Marconi, engineers of HVJ and of American broadcasting executives. Hearst radio engineers were among the first to tune in on test broadcasts from the Vatican station.

our words turn as many of you are far from faith and from the unity of Christ. For you every day we offer prayers to God and the Lord of All, earnestly asking that He with His light illuminate you and guide you and unite you to the sheep which hear His voice, and that there be only one fold and one shepherd.

"To governors—and since we are debtors to all, we speak first to those who govern, that they command in justice and in charity, toward utility and edification, and not toward ruin, always remembering that there is no power if not from God, and that to God they must render rigorous count.

OBEDIENCE TO RULERS

"To subjects—To subjects, then we say, that they should obey their superiors, not as toward men, but as toward God, knowing that he who resists legitimate authority resists the dispositions of God, and that he who in this way resists prepares damnation for himself.

"To the rich—We speak to rich and poor in this way; to the rich we say that they must consider themselves as ministers of Divince Providence and depositaries and dispensers of their goods, to whom Jesus Christ himself recommended the poor, and from whom the Divine Judge, then, will demand more because they have received more; and they must remember always the Divine word, 'Woe unto you, oh rich.'

"To the poor—we exhort, then in the Lord, the poor who recall to us the poverty of Jesus Christ our Lord and Savior. Remembering His examples and His promises they should not abandon the gathering of spiritual riches, rendered so much more easily to thme, and though attempting insofar as is legal to better their state, with good and upright heart let them make themselves agreeable to the Lord, and let them never extend their hands toward iniquity.

WORKERS AND EMPLOYERS

"To workmen and employers—We earnestly beg of workmen and of employers that, avoiding every hostile contest and mutual strife, joined in fraternal and friendly alliance. They exchange on the one hand the means and direction and on the other hand the work and ability; and, not asking except what is just, and not denying what is just, let them strive in tranquility and order, not so much for the benefit of the one but for the good of all.

"To the afflicted and persecuted—Last in execution, but first in our attention and in our affections, our word goes out to you, to all of you who are in infirmity and in sorrow, in tribulation and adversity, especially to you who suffer such terrible things from the enemies of God and of human society.

"While we offer for your are prayers and as much as we can, also our assistance, while we recommend you to the charity of all we speak to you on the part of Christ Whom we represent 'come to Me all you who are weary and afflicted and I will restore you.'

"There remains only the imparting, with all our hearts, of the apostolic benediction to the city and to the world, and to all those who live in it, which we do in the name of the Father, the Son and the Holy Ghost."

Pope, in Second Address, Thanks God for Radio

ROME, Feb. 12.—(AP.)—The text of the Pope's address at the Pontifical Academy of Science, the second he delivered today, translated from Italian into English, follows:

"We say most willingly that our acceptance of the radio station is most dear to us, but still more dear is the gift and the sentiment of Senator Marconi.

"We offer thanks to God and thanks to man for this great new invention. Thanks to God for his manifestations, so genuine and so accurate of His divine goodness. We give thanks to God for this great invention which brings us so close to him.

"No one will think that we are far from the primate of Peter in adopting this new invention. Let it be known that we have adopted it in the true sense of Peter propagating the church.

"It is a privilege to accept this great invention which we shall use as an instrument to spread the faith and the church."

CHAPLIN SCORNS BIG RADIO OFFER

NEW YORK, Feb. 12.—(AP.)—Not for $650,000 will Charlie Chaplin open his mouth for the great American radio audience.

The Blaine-Thompson Advertising Agency announced that in behalf of one of its clients it had made two propositions to the comedian. One called for the payment of $650,000 to Chaplin for 26 programs of 15 minutes duration, Chaplin to say anything he liked from any point in the United States he chose.

The other called for the payment of $130,000 for 26 electrical transcriptions, these recordings to be played by radio stations.

Both propositions were presented to Chaplin personally at his hotel, and both were flatly refused. The offer of $650,000 for 26 broadcasts is by far the highest ever made for any artist, according to radio authorities here.

Quart May Send Man to Cell For Life

KANSAS CITY, Kan., Feb. 12.—(AP.)—Estil P. Butler may go to the penitentiary for life for possessing a quart of liquor.

Convicted here under the habitual criminal act for liquor possession,—a quart—his only hope of escaping life imprisonment lies in an appeal to the Supreme Court. The county attorney requested the life sentence making it mandatory under the law.

Strong Gale, Waves Batter British Isles

LONDON, Feb. 12.—(INS.)—One of the fiercest gales experienced this winter swept the British Isles today, battering the coastlines with huge waves.

Small vessels scurried to shelter, and ships in the channel and North Sea waters were badly buffeted. Some property damage has been reported from inland arenas.

POLICE SEEKING MISSING MAN

Fearing foul play has befallen Charles Mignogna, 28, of Sixth street, Pitcairn, county detectives and Pitcairn police today were conducting an intensive search for him. Mignogna, a collector for the John Hancock Life Insurance Company, was last seen by acquaintances at 1 a. m. Tuesday, detectives were told.

Mignogna made collections in Trafford Monday night and missed the last street car home. He started to walk back to Pitcairn, and was last seen on a bridge between the two towns, according to a member of his family. The collector is said to have had $150 on his person when he departed from Trafford.

ALMA RUBENS FLED FROM MATE ON WEDDING NIGHT

FARNUM UNION LASTED LESS THAN DAY

Fine Arts Films Failed After Actress' First Picture; Quickly Signed by Ince

By ALMA RUBENS.

CHAPTER XII.

The first scenes were to be shot at Redwood. Allan Dwan was the director and there were 15 in the company besides Doug and myself. The cameraman was Victor Fleming, and it was in this picture that Winifred Westover, who later married and divorced Bill Hart, crept into prominence.

Never shall I forget this, my first trip over night on location. The company was quartered in a queer little mountain shack resort in the wildest country I ever saw. No sooner had dusk settled down over us than the coyotes I thought they were timber wolves—began their infernal yapping, which they kept up until dawn.

I lay in bed with the covers pulled over my head, afraid to breathe. For an eternity, it seemed, I lay there, my nerves tautened to the breaking point, before I slept.

Miss Rubens

The "Half Breed" was Fine Arts' last picture. The company went broke the day after my parents, whom I had sent for on the strength of my contract—arrived in Los Angeles. I had rented a furnished flat for them on Seventh avenue, and we had quite a celebration in honor of the event.

When I learned that Fine Arts was going out of business I was frantic. I had used my last cent in getting my parents settled. And they had used their last penny in making the long trip from San Francisco.

I dreaded the ordeal of telling my mother. I dawdled away as much time as I could, simply to postpone meeting her. I never was any good as a liar, and even if I failed to tell her, I knew she'd find out anyhow.

Then I got one of the greatest—and sweetest—surprises of my life. My mother met me at the door. She was waving a telegram.

It was from Thomas Ince, then head of Triangle, with their studio in Inceville. He wanted to know if I would play in "Truthful Tullivet," with William S. Hart.

Would I? It was manna from heaven. And I lost no time in sending him word that I would be there first thing in the morning.

Hart High Hatter

It was during the filming of this picture that Hart met Winifred Westover, whom he subsequently married. She had a small part, and at the beginning he high-hatted her something terrible.

Hart complimented me on the work I had done in the "Half Breed," with Fairbanks, and explained to me what I would have to do in his picture. I listened intently and assured him that I could carry out the role.

Then we went on location.

I made two more pictures for Ince in which Hart played the leads.

It was during the filming of the last of these that I met Franklyn Farnum, who became the first of my three husbands, a marriage destined to last but a scant 24 hours.

Franklyn Farnum came to Triangle just about the time that Tex Guinan broke into the movies, trying to create a female Bill Hart. He was a handsome man and all the girls, including myself, promptly fell in love with him.

I was just at that romantic age—about 18—when I could fall in and out of love every 24 hours. I think the thing that drew me to Farnum more than anything else was his beautiful shirts. He had the most gorgeous silk shirts I ever saw. Dozens of them. He never wore the same one twice, it seemed. All monogrammed and all of the most vivid patterns.

It was also the same way with his suits. He had one for every occasion. His valet was always with him on the lots and sometimes he would make a complete change between shots. Just for the sake of keeping his immaculate appearance.

His for Asking

And he had the most beautiful teeth—even, white and sparkling, and, capping the climax, as it were was his beautiful shiny Hupp car, a roadster, of special design. It was a thing to rave about. Dark brown, with yellow stripes, that car had me absolutely daffy. And when he finally noticed me and invited me to take a ride with him, my joy knew no bounds.

ALMA'S FIRST HUSBAND

TEX GUINAN — FRANKLYN FARNUM

Mr. Farnum in an old western at the time of his marriage to Miss Rubens, who left him about 15 hours later. Miss Guinan was then trying to break into the movies as a female "William S. Hart."

I was his for the asking and ask me he did.

I was so smitten that I would joyfully have followed him to the ends of the world, would have done anything at his bidding, I suppose. But for some mysterious reason, he chose to carry on a protracted and ardent—I might say hectic—courtship.

On the occasion of our first ride he told me he loved me more dearly than anything else in the world. He said he was 30. I afterward found out he was past 43.

He accompanied me home and I introduced him to my parents. my father being ill in bed—in one of his frequent relapses at the time. My father hated him from the moment he laid eyes on him. My mother, too, warned me after he had gone, that he had deceived me as to his age. I wouldn't believe her. My father, too, had his number.

"Dot Dapper Don," he groaned. "He runs around like a panther. You can't hear him ven he valks. Don't have nothing to do with him, Baby."

I refused to take their advice, however. I met Farnum regularly on the lots and frequently he would take me riding in his magnificent automobile.

His actual proposal of marriage came while he was engaged on a picture being filmed at Universal City. He boasted that he was getting $400 a week, a sum unheard of in those days. I was duly impressed.

He must have anticipated my acceptance, because the moment I said "yes," he reached into his waistcoat and drew out a beautiful small diamond, perhaps a carat in size. I thought it was the most gorgeous gem in existence, and it made me so happy that I burst into tears.

It seems to me now, looking back over the years, that my life has been one vale of tears. I cried when I was happy and I cried when I was unhappy. I cried in between. My mother has often told me that if some way could have been found to store my tears, we never would have to spend $15,000 in irrigating our ranch.

When the day's work was ended I rushed home to tell my mother and father of my good fortune. They both advised me against marriage.

I would listen to none of their entreaties, however, and finally, mother promised to make me a wedding dress. She worked all that night on that dress, a beautiful white crepe affair, with a veil and a long train. I awoke about 7 o'clock the next morning when she had completed it. Her face was drawn and haggard and her eyes bloodshot from her night of tears. But she made no protest when I informed her we were going to be married that day.

Quiet Wedding

My father was too ill to attend the wedding, held in the afternoon at the Church Around the Corner, in Los Angeles. My mother and the church sexton were my witnesses. Nobody else was there.

The ceremony over, my husband drove us in his car to my home; my mother got out and went inside to get my suitcase and we were off.

My father had refused to see Farnum, a refusal which almost broke my heart at the time, but which, in view of later events, caused me to forgive him.

Our honeymoon began in the "Ship Cafe," Santa Monica, where we went for our wedding supper. I had wanted my husband to take mother with us there, but he would have no part of her. He said we would be too conspicuous. And, as usual, I let him have his way.

Strange and sudden as everything had been, I was happy. Proud of my handsome husband, and head over heels 'n love with him, I thought. We had great difficulty in getting a table, but finally the head waiter found us one almost in the middle of the room, which was crowded.

My husband ordered. I forgot what. I was too happy, to care, and I don't remember of having eaten a bite up to the time I was rudely shocked back to earth by his vicious remark:

"What are you flirting with that man for?"

He pointed at a handsome youth, sitting with another girl at a side table. I never before had seen this man, but later I learned that it was Norman Kerry. I afterwards became acquainted with him, very friendly in fact, and like myself, neither of us was aware of the other's presence.

My husband would not believe me, however, and insisted that we leave. Then we went to the King George Roof, atop the hotel where he had made reservations.

We had two dances and he excused himself, returning 15 minutes later with the abrupt remark:

"Well, let's go!"

There was nothing else for me to do but follow my lord and master. I would have liked a few more dances. The details of that honeymoon night I later set forth in my annulment suit. Sufficient to say that before daybreak I had fled and taken a taxicab for home.

I remember little of that ride. I was so hysterical and ill. But the sight of our own little flat was the sweetest thing I ever expect to see.

I leaped out before the cab was at a standstill and ran to the door. And as I did so I became aware that my husband, in his brown roadster, had followed me.

Even as I rang the bell he skidded to a stop at the curb and made a dash for me. I screamed. And just before he reached out for me the door opened, my mother caught me, dragged me inside and slammed the door in his face.

Policeman Guarded Over Kidnap Charge

LONG BEACH, Cal., Feb. 12.—(INS.)—Armed guards were placed over Patrolman W. H. Waggoner at the Seaside Hospital here today as the result of reports that eastern gunmen had been imported to keep him from testifying in the Zeke Caress kidnaping case. Waggoner was wounded during a gun battle with Caress' asserted kidnapers.

After Caress and his wife were kidnaped his captors forced him to sign a check for $50,000. The kidnapers were on their way to a gambling ship to cash the check when police engaged them in a gun battle.

JEWISH RELIEF WORK DOUBLES

Jewish welfare work in January was double that of normal months and represents an increase of 40 per cent over November and December, Eugene Herrick, president of the Jewish Family Welfare, reported at the annual organization meeting of the Federation of Jewish Philanthropies yesterday in the William Penn Hotel. The Jewish Family Welfare is one of the 17 social agencies forming the federation.

A. M. Oppenheimer was re-elected head of the federation yesterday and Raymond M. Kaufmann was elected first vice president. Leon Falk, Jr., was elected second vice president. Max L. Blum was re-elected treasurer and Perahman T. Weil was elected assistant treasurer. Miss Minnie Allcher was re-elected secretary.

Herrick's report indicates that the economic depression is forcing an increase in the number of cases and that this year will be a critical one. The federation next Sunday will open their drive for $450,000 to continue the welfare work. Rabbi Abba Hillel Silver, of Cleveland, will be guest speaker at the meeting opening the drive.

2 HELD IN JURY 'FIX' ATTEMPT

Alleged to have talked to members of a jury in Criminal Court regarding the case being tried, Harry Southworth and Joseph Yavo were held for action of the grand jury when arraigned before Alderman George J. Anderson yesterday. The men are charged with conspiracy and embracery.

District Attorney Andrew T. Park ordered the charges preferred against the pair after he had been informed that they had attempted to influence a juror in the case of the commonwealth against Yavo, who was on trial on a morality charge. Yavo was convicted on the charge and has been in jail since in default of $20,000 bond.

The pair are said to have talked to Richard Coates, a juror hearing the evidence against Yavo. Yavo was returned to jail after the hearing but Southworth was released on $2,000 bond.

COUNCIL SEEKS PAVING DATA

Request for repaving of the Banksville road, from Woodville avenue to the Banksville settlement, by the city, has been sent to the Public Works Department for a survey and estimated cost for consideration of City Council.

Request for repaving of about a three-quarter mile stretch of roadway was made by the West End Board of Trade at council meeting yesterday. Council also instructed the Engineering and Public Works Department to submit estimates on all possible improvements proposed in the city with view to including the plans in the next Peoples Bond Issue.

PRINCES FETED IN PERU

LIMA, Peru, Feb. 12.—(INS.)—Britain's royal "trade ambassadors," the Prince of Wales and his brother, Prince George, mingled today with the festive crowds of the "City of Kings" and received the cheers of its populace.

The royal party arrived here from Callao port by automobile for a two-day visit, and immediately plunged into a program of official receptions, dinners and golf. They will continue their journey into South Peru by airplane.

The Prince of Wales responded to greetings here in the Spanish language, to the great delight of his audience. In his public appearance he was cheered continually.

At Callao 21 guns saluted the arrival of the heir, and President Luis Sanchez Cerro headed the distinguished list on the welcoming committee here. Many honors were bestowed on the princes.

AIMEE IN JAPAN, AIDED OFF SHIP

KOBE, Japan, Feb. 12.—(INS.)—Her ill health apparent, Mrs. Aimee Semple McPherson, Los Angeles evangelist, arrived here today aboard the steamer President Wilson with her daughter, Roberta.

When she walked down the gangplank, the evangelist was assisted by her daughter and a stewardess.

Mrs. McPherson declined to be interviewed. Her daughter said:

"Mother is making a trip around the world to regain her health. We intend to stop over at Hongkong, where I was born. No, I don't care to discuss the quarrels in which mother was involved in Angelus Temple affairs."

Vare Plans Florida Visit With Family

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 12.—(AP.)—William S. Vare, Philadelphia political leader, plans to leave next Monday for his annual visit to his cottage at St. Lucie, Fla., it was announced.

Accompanying Vare will be his wife, their daughter, Beatrice, and several friends. It has not been definitely decided how long Vare will remain in the South.

Patrons Flee Store As Gas Gun Goes Off

SACRAMENTO, Cal., Feb. 12.—(AP.)—Detective John Gabrielli dropped a tear gas gun as he leaned over to lace up a new pair of shoes in a shop here yesterday.

The gas ran out and so did the shoe store's patrons—some in their stocking feet. Everyone wept, the detective the most. Gabrielli was treated at a hospital.

Bread Line Registry Planned in New York

NEW YORK, Feb. 12.—(INS.)—A central registration of all bread-line applicants to make feeding of destitute men more orderly and less wasteful will be worked out here, it was announced today. Seventy-nine bread lines and feeding stations are in operation, it was disclosed.

Skinny, I Gained 25 Lbs. and Lovely, Clear Skin Quick

"I was underweight for years. Finally took Ironized Yeast. Quickly gained 25 pounds. Skin is now lovely, clear and free. Mrs. W. Hardrick," is one of many letters received each week from men and women amazed at gain of 5 to 15 pounds in three weeks. Eyes hollows vanish. Many pimples round out. Sallow, blemished skin gets clear and rosy like magic. Nervousness, indigestion, constipation disappear. Sound sleep, new pep quick. Two great tonics in one special weight building Brewer's Yeast and strengthening iron. Ironized little tablets. Far stronger than unmedicated yeast. Results in one-half time. No yeasty taste nor gas. Don't go around skinny, ugly, unattractive. Get Ironized Yeast from druggist today. Test it at our risk. Money back from manufacturer if not delighted.

Breaks Up a Cold In a Jiffy

Feel Like a New Person Almost Before You Know It

Take two tablets now.

Better almost before you know it.

If you want quick relief from a cold, go back to first principles and use something you know does the business—don't start "trying" a lot of fancy ideas or remedies. Even a "little" cold is too dangerous to take chances on.

Get Hill's Cascara Quinine. A scientific formula made to do ONE THING WELL: to knock a cold in a jiffy, not to cure a hundred different things.

Take two tablets now. Then follow directions on box. Drink lots of water, too—that's all. Soon those mean, aching pains in head and body begin to go; the cold breaks up, poisons leave your system. Almost before you know it, you feel like a new person.

If it doesn't do that, your money back. Get a box now. You'll be surprised at the speed with which it works. Costs only a few cents.

CHURCHMEN ASK RECEIVERSHIP

Following a church battle which has been in the courts on and off for four years, members of the congregation of the First Slavish Roman Catholic Greek Rite Church, Clairton, have petitioned Common Pleas Court to appoint a receiver for the corporation, which owns $150,000 of real estate. No date has been set for a hearing.

Peter Pido Andrew Protz, Jr., and John Matris, Jr., filed the suit against Steve Pavanda, president; Vasil Vahhola, treasurer, and George Holodyak, secretary of the board of trustees. Last Monday the same plaintiffs came into court asking for contempt proceedings against the trustees, who they alleged had refused to open the church to allow Father Michael B. Rapach, newly appointed pastor, to take charge of the services. The trustees had previously been enjoined from interfering with a priest holding services. This case is to be heard February 17.

In the receivership suit it is charged the trustees have attempted to sell the property, have refused to pay bills with the intention of inviting creditors to sell out the corporation, and have caused great financial loss by keeping the church closed and thus losing donations and collections.

EAGLES ANSWER RUM CHARGE

Officers of Homestead Aerie No. 769, Fraternal Order of Eagles, filed an answer in Federal Court to the prohibition authorities bill of complaint seeking an injunction because of alleged law violations in the club rooms, 325 East Ninth street, Homestead.

Club officials declared in the answer that if any liquor was sold on the premises it was without their consent or knowledge. They also brought in the name of Charles Seuffert, steward, who shot himself to death October 30, when prohibition agents entered the club rooms to search for liquor. They said Seuffert had never been authorized to sell liquor in the club.

The answer declared that if prohibition agents entered the club rooms they did so unlawfully.

Stop Night Rising

It's Nature's Danger Signal, Man of 74 Relieved.

Jacob S. Yoder, Charm, Ohio, says: "Have had bladder irritation for 18 years and was bothered 6 to 8 times each night. Tried many medicines but found relief only from Lithiated Buchu (Keller Formula). Will gladly tell or write my complete experience." It acts on bladder as epsom salts do on bowels. Drives out fuel in deposits and lessens excessive acidity. This relieves the irritation that causes getting up nights. The tablets cost 2c each at all drug stores. PIANO LESSONS

"THE COURSE THAT ANY CHILD CAN LEARN"

NEXT Sunday, February 15th, the Sun-Telegraph will publish the third lesson of the W. Scott Grove Course in Piano Playing. This course is so simple that any child can, by its aid, be started on the way to proficiency on the piano or organ. The fundamental principles in music must first be mastered . . . that is essential. The Music Simplifier Course in Piano Playing teaches the fundamental principles in the easiest and simplest manner possible. It makes the learning a pleasure study by making it fascinating. You know at all times what you are doing, why you are doing it, and what progress you are making.

The author of the plan believes that any person will reach the point where he can play simple popular music, and if he wants to get beyond that, and in all probability he will, Pittsburgh instruction offers the best possible training.

Each lesson will be printed one time only. Remember there are 24 of them. Lesson 3 Sunday, Feb. 15th. Preceding copies of these lessons can be procured from the Circulation Dept.

"ONLY a cold." What a stupid remark! For every cold is a threat—a warning. Every hour makes you more miserable—weakens your resistance—makes it easier for your cold to develop into something far worse.

Go after your cold HARD . . . and end it in a hurry. Rub Mentholatum vigorously on your chest. Cover it with flannel to speed its action. Then drink plenty of water to carry the poisons from the cold out of your system.

Put just a bit of Mentholatum in each nostril to keep your nasal passages clear. It does not irritate sore surfaces. The odor is pleasing.

CITY GETS AIR EXPRESS LINK

Officials of Pittsburgh Airways, Inc., and the Western Union Telegraph Company today announced that air express service will be inaugurated next Monday between New York and Pittsburgh. Stops will be made at Newark, Coatesville, Greensburg, Harrisburg, Johnstown, Lancaster, York and Pittsburgh. Sixteen cities will be given air express service through the linking of this service with that already given through the collaboration of the Western Union and several other lines.

The fast aerial service, coupled with motorized pickup and delivery by messengers in all of the 16 cities, makes possible quick transfer of parcels. Beginning Monday, packages may be left at Western Union offices or will be picked up by messenger on call for delivery in the 16 eastern cities.

SUES FOR SON'S DEATH BY AUTO

Mrs. Margaret B. Schrecker, of Mellon street, has filed suit for $50,000 damages in Common Pleas Court against J. Barton Schaeffer, of Kittanning, charging that his automobile killed her son, John G. Schrecker, December 15.

Mrs. Schrecker says in her statement that her son had been her sole support since the death of her husband, Adam, in 1916, and avers the young man devoted his life to earning a living for her. He was alighting from a street car at Negley and Wesley avenues when, it is said, the automobile of the defendant struck him, fracturing his skull.

TINY RAIL LINE TO BE TORN UP

NEW YORK, Feb. 12.—(AP.)—Believed to be the world's shortest railroad, the Governors Island mile-and-one-half rail system will be dismantled at once. The road has been condemned by the United States Army.

The road, between docks on the island, was built during the war and was then eight miles long. Until recently it had a dispatcher and full crew.

All equipment, including "Big Bertha," the engine for 13 years, will be sold.

Robber Sentenced To 24 Years in Pen

WASHINGTON, Pa., Feb. 12.—Letch Cutlip, 42, of Gypsy, W. Va., was sentenced to the Western penitentiary for from 24 to 48 years, following his conviction on three charges of robbery. Cutlip is the last of a gang of four men to be sentenced for a series of robberies in Western Pennsylvania, Ohio and West Virginia.

Real Estate

Huss Brothers, East End brokers, have sold for Frank A. Klaus to Alex Hutchinson a building housing two store rooms at 606-08 South avenue for a total consideration of $10,000. The purchaser, according to the brokers, is now remodeling the property into a suite of offices. The same brokers have sold for Albert Martin to William B. Means an eight-room brick house on lot 24x126 feet to an alley at 814 North Beatty street. A two-car garage is included in the deal. Means will use the property for a residence.

The Ben F. Williams Company, Mt. Lebanon realtors, has sold for the Bupp-Salkeld Company a new stone residence of eight rooms and three baths in Roycroft avenue, Mt. Lebanon, to Gus J. Linder, of Brookline. No consideration was given. The Ben F. Williams Company has been appointed renting agents for the Colonial Arms Apartments, the Wil-lo-be Apartments and the Louise Apartments, Mt. Lebanon.

A property at 1415 Squirrel Hill avenue, Fourteenth Ward, consisting of 10 rooms and a two-car garage on a lot measuring 100x90 feet, has been sold by William A. Blair, representing George Brothers, realtors, for John Follansbee to J. Shirley Austin. No selling price was made public.

James W. Wallace has been elected president of the Retail Lumber Dealers' Association of Western Pennsylvania. Other new officers include Emerson C. West and Clarence C. Dudenhoeffer, vice presidents; G. P. Textor, treasurer; R. F. McCrea, secretary; M. W. Dickey, field secretary, and Carl Van der Voort, general counsel. The directors are R. F. Little, Howard B. Madore, H. E. Knepp, A. E. Kerr, H. C. Walker and E. Bruce Hill.

A home in Avenue "A," Forrest Hills Borough, on lot 40x105 feet has been sold to Charles S. Bousum by the Interborough Improvement Company for a consideration of $7,160.

Allegheny County has purchased from Frank A. Craig an improved property on lot 10x60 feet in Findley Township for $4,000.

"The Interstate Broadcasting Chain" has rented an office outside the KQV studios in the Investment Building.

The paint was still wet when we investigated yesterday. It appears that the "Interstate" people are to book programs for the proposed "400 Group" to take in WLBW, WWVA, WNBO, WJAC, WCAM with KQV the key.

Meanwhile Lucien Spriggs and his boys showed much activity at 942-944 Hotel Henry where a sign, "Tri-State Broadcasting Company," hangs conspicuously on the door.

Our hats off to Martin L. Davey whose soothing reverie on Sundays has reached 608 selections without a note of jazz.

We can't have Frank Shaw from Coffee Dan's at WBBM in Chicago but we are to get the witty Lenny Page of KMOX in a Coffee Dan repartee to be broadcast over KQV every Monday, Wednesday and Friday at 9:30 starting tomorrow night.

Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd is to speak on WJAS on Monday, February 23, via Columbia hookup.

Ah, Sweet Mystery of Life, from

The Loudspeaker

—By LOUIS REID—

NEW YORK, Feb. 12.—The broadcasters no longer confine their time on patriotic holidays to speeches by those high in authority. They seek out the note of human interest, bring to their microphones experienced impersonators, custodians of museums, various persons qualified to speak intimately of America's immortals.

Thus Lincoln's Birthday is now best commemorated on the air not by the speeches of those in the seats of the mighty, but by Edgar White Burrill's reading of Ida Tarbell's vivid pen-picture, "He Knew Lincoln," and a word-tour through the Lincoln Museum by Lewis G. Reynolds, its caretaker.

* * *

Both Burrill and Reynolds are familiar to radio listeners. So appealing have been their broadcasts in other years that they have become accepted as radio traditions on Lincoln's Birthday. A microphonic trip through Washington's home at Mt. Vernon is similarly regarded as the most effective way in which the radio men can pay tribute to the first President.

* * *

Since 1922 Burrill has been impersonating Bill Brown, the man "who knew Lincoln," on the air. The originator of Town Hall's "Literary Vespers," he has presented annually the Lincoln Day reading as his only regular connection with radio. Reynolds was heard for the first time last year.

* * *

The broadcasters might appropriately make visits to other historical shrines, might give the people in the parlors intimate pictures of Jefferson and Jackson and Lee. They might even take a leaf from the note books of the new biographers and present radio portraits of the vivid figures of other times—of say Mark Hanna and Bryan and Carrie Nation and Dowie and James J. Hill, the industrial beginnings of John D. and Carnegie and Ford.

* * *

I am still able to suppress all curiosity to hear a program made up entirely of stein songs.

Next to the wailing of crooners, college songs, to my mind, have become the most accurate test of a listener's endurance.

Of all the songs inspired by the weather, none, in my opinion, has ever surpassed the zip of "Wait Till the Sun Shines, Nellie."

I am ever captivated by the varied pronunciation of "Notre Dame" on the microphone.

It is a matter of curiosity to me to know if the failure of the broadcasters to sell time to handkerchief manufacturers is due to their reluctance to air weepy programs.

* * *

Radio, it is a pleasure for me to report, seems definitely to have halted the careers of those old-fashioned bassos who once boomed "Rocked in the Cradle of the Deep."

Just as I have yet to hear a Southerner sing a mammy song so I have yet to hear a Negro chorus sing "Dixie" on the radio. But I can imagine that the average Negro chorus can sing "Dixie" with a gusto that would rock me right out of my chair.

In the repeated listings of radio's achievements I have yet to find that the microphone has made ballyhoo the most flourishing of American industries.

YOU can't do your best if you are only one half well

NO MATTER how conscientious you are—no matter how anxious you are to do your best, it just cannot be done consistently day in and day out, when you are only one-half well.

Body weakness, lack of appetite, underweight, paleness, sallow complexion, pimples and boils are symptoms of a low blood count. These may indicate that you need S.S.S.

S.S.S. restores the red-blood-cells to normal. Your appetite picks up, your whole body is strengthened, invigorated—you feel like yourself again!

How to recognize a low blood count
Fatigue without any apparent cause, sluggishness, loss of appetite, loss of body weight, paleness, boils and pimples are outstanding symptoms of a LOW RED-BLOOD-CELL COUNT. The red-cells are your body builders. They carry nourishment to every part of the body. Also, they remove impurities from the tissues. When your red-cells drop to 80 per cent of normal strength, you haven't the proper number of workers to keep you "fit." 60 per cent of normal is dangerous.

(Left) Microscopic view of healthy red-blood-cells. The blood stream should contain about 5,000,000 of these cells to the cubic millimeter. They carry nourishment and oxygen to every part of the body. Also, they remove impurities from the tissues.
(Right) Anemic red-blood-cells—only 60 per cent of normal strength—they lack the power to resist infection and disease or to rebuild flesh and to carry away the impurities. Such a condition is responsible for body weakness, loss of appetite, underweight, paleness, sallow complexion, boils and pimples.

DRIVE PLANNED BY FRIGIDAIRE

DAYTON, O., Feb. 12.—(AP.)—Frigidaire Corporation officials meeting here announced they will launch immediately a $7,000,000 advertising and sales promotion program. It was also announced that the Frigidaire plant here was now working at full capacity, 6,500 employes reporting for duty.

Al Hattenbach, president of the Suburban Electric Development Company, local representative of the Frigidaire Corporation, said Pittsburgh is one of 40 key cities of the country in which the corporation will hold spring sales conventions the latter part of this month. Dealers in Western Pennsylvania and Eastern Ohio will assemble here February 23 to hear the 1931 program of the corporation.

Principal speakers will be J. J. Nance, sales promotion manager of Dayton, O., and F. D. Doty, advertising manager. There will be a dinner in the evening. Six convention parties of factory officials will leave the offices of the corporation in Dayton to conduct the 40 sales conventions.

LOVED LOBSTERS BUT SUFFERED IF HE ATE THEM

"I like lobsters better than most any food, but I used to suffer when I ate them," says Edward J. Owens, well-known salesman of 86 Falmouth St., Boston, Mass.

"I would have sick headaches; would belch, leaving a sour taste in my mouth; suffered a lot with gas on my stomach.

"I tried many things before my druggist persuaded me to take some Pape's Diapepsin.

"It took me right out of my trouble. I have a better appetite, eat lobsters, pork or anything I want and have no after-effects. I believe in Pape's Diapepsin and recommend it to everyone I know."

If you suffer from indigestion, often or just occasionally, get a package of these candy-like tablets from your druggist. They stop heartburn, gas on stomach, belching, nausea, headaches or any other symptom of indigestion soon as the trouble starts. They are harmless; form no habit; can be taken as often as needed.

A THREE DAYS' COUGH IS YOUR DANGER SIGNAL

Coughs from colds may lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for coughs from colds and bronchial irritations. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the inflamed membranes and stop the irritation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of coughs from colds, bronchitis and minor forms of bronchial irritations, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist.

SUNSHINE MELLOWS Heat Purifies

LUCKIES are always kind to your throat

The advice of your physician is: Keep out of doors, in the open air, breathe deeply; take plenty of exercise in the mellow sunshine, and have a periodic check-up on the health of your body.

Everyone knows that sunshine mellows—that's why the "TOASTING" process includes the use of the Ultra Violet Rays. LUCKY STRIKE—made of the finest tobaccos—the Cream of the Crop—THEN—"IT'S TOASTED"—an extra, secret heating process. Harsh irritants present in all raw tobaccos are expelled by "TOASTING." These irritants are sold to others. They are not present in your LUCKY STRIKE. No wonder LUCKIES are always kind to your throat.

DROUGHT FUND GROWING

Contributions to the Red Cross drought relief fund continued to pour in to Red Cross headquarters in the Chamber of Commerce Building today. The total amount raised in Pittsburgh to date is $249,918.35. Pittsburgh's quota is $300,000 in the national appeal for drought relief funds.

A number of Bible classes from churches of all denominations in the community have sent their contributions for the relief of drought-stricken families.

The Western Pennsylvania School for the Blind sent $17.50, representing gifts of staff and students. From the Highland School in West View came $14 representing Valentine money of the pupils of rooms 4 and 5. Mr. J. Rogers Flannery, head of the committee in charge of the drought relief fund, received a check for $250 from the Pittsburgh Fire Department Emergency Fund.

MAN ARRESTED IN STOCK SALE

GREENSBURG, Pa., Feb. 11.—State police from Greensburg Barracks arrested Clarence L. Koffman, 41, in Shady avenue, Pittsburgh, and have taken him to Newfoundland, Wayne County, where he is wanted for alleged fake stock schemes.

According to police, Koffman had been staying in Pittsburgh and state securities representatives are investigating activities there.

Police say that Koffman dealt in various kinds of stocks alleged to be worthless, taking mortgages in return.

CHEST COLDS Vanish Quick!

For over 40 years doctors have prescribed KONDON'S Catarrhal Jelly for chest colds, head colds, catarrh. Put one drop in nose. Breathe deep. Heat of body turns KONDON'S into vapors which spread in nose, throat and chest. You feel clearer in a flash. Stuffiness, coughing, phlegm, wheezing all end. Rub also on chest. Delightful warm glow. Penetrates skin. Quick relief will amaze you. All druggists.

Cut This Out.

Old English Preparation For Catarrh, Catarrhal Deafness and Head Noises

If you know someone who is troubled with head noises, or catarrhal deafness, cut out this paragraph and hand it to them, and you may have been the means of saving some poor sufferer perhaps from total deafness. We believe that catarrh, catarrhal deafness, head noises, etc., are caused by constitutional disease, and that salves, sprays, inhalers, etc., merely temporize with the complaint, and seldom, if ever, give permanent relief. This being so, much time has been spent in perfecting a pure, gentle, yet effective tonic, that should quickly dispel all traces of the catarrhal poison from the system. The effective prescription which was eventually formulated is given below in an understandable form, so that anyone can use it in their own home at little expense.

Secure from all Mays & Liggett's drug stores or your druggist one ounce of Parmint (Double Strength). Take this home and add to it ¼ pint of hot water and a little granulated sugar; stir until dissolved. Take one tablespoonful four times a day.

The first dose should begin to relieve the distressing head noises, headache, dullness, cloudy thinking, etc., while the hearing should rapidly return as the system is invigorated by the tonic action of the treatment. Loss of smell and mucus dropping in the back of the throat are other symptoms that show the presence of catarrhal poison and which are often overcome by this efficacious treatment. If nearly ninety per cent of all ear troubles are directly caused by catarrh there must be many people whose hearing may be restored by this simple home treatment.

* * *

Even though the formal season is over, there are going to be a few entertainments for the debs.

Honoring Debutante

Mrs. Fredric T. Billings will give a card party in honor of Elizabeth McKay, daughter of the Thomas L. McKays, who made her debut in June. The date hasn't been definitely decided upon yet.

* * *

Now for a little travel news. Mrs. William Thaw, Jr., and her sister, Miss Rachel Dohrman, left Tuesday by motor for St. Petersburg. And Joan Dichl, who has been in California, has sailed from San Francisco on the Virginia through the Panama Canal to Havana, where she'll stay for a while. Later Joan will visit Miami and Palm Beach.

And Elizabeth Childs and her grandmother, Mrs. James G. Pontefract, will leave tomorrow for the Southwest. After a visit to Mexico City they'll go to Pasadena to be the guests of the William S. Charnleys, formerly of Sewickley. They plan to return in March.

* * *

Representative and Mrs. Edmund F. Erk have had as their guests in Washington during the last two weeks Mrs. Erk's sister, Mrs. S. M. Kintner, of Beechwood boulevard, and Mrs. George Constance, of Negley avenue. They were guests at the White House reception to Senators and Representatives and the reception for Vice President Curtis at the Congressional Club.

Honor Guests

Among the parties held in their honor was a luncheon, bridge given by Mrs. Erk at the Congressional Club, a luncheon bridge by Mrs. Richardson at the Kenwood Country Club, Mrs. Watson's party at the Army and Navy Club, and a dinner given by Mr. and Mrs. John I. Power.

Mrs. Kintner and Mrs. Constance will spend several days at Atlantic City and motor to Pittsburgh Saturday.

* * *

Wintering in California is Mrs. F. R. Lewis, who is at the Maryland Hotel, Pasadena.

Miss Gertrude Yates, of Sewickley, who has spent the past year in New York, has had as her guests her brother and sister, the Bruce Clinton Yateses, of North Dakota. The Yateses sailed Friday for three months in England, Spain, France and Italy.

* * *

Pitt Women Hear Talk On Sleep

Everybody has his own repertoire of positions which he takes while asleep, Dr. H. M. Johnson told the University of Pittsburgh Women's Association yesterday in his talk on "Sleeping Like a Child." Dr. Johnson showed slides made from charts and photographs to illustrate his talk. These showed at what hours a child changes his position and that he takes approximately 52 positions during the night. Pictures of the devices with which these statistics were obtained were shown also.

The average rest period for an adult (this meaning the time in which he does not change his position) is from 11½ to 12 minutes, but children are much more restless, he pointed out.

Experiments prove, Dr. Johnson said, that the afternoon nap in nowise interfered with the night's rest, except that sometimes the child takes longer to fall asleep. Moreover, the afternoon sleep is the more quiet. Deformities can not be produced by sleeping postures, he said, for this belief is based on the assumption that a child lies in one position and the experiments proved that every change of position tends to undo the strain of its predecessor.

The women are meeting this year in the University Club and, according to their custom, supplemented yesterday's meeting with a tea hour.

They are having their annual benefit at the University Club tomorrow night.

* * *

Sponsored by the Twentieth Century Club as a memorial to Mary Budd Turpin, Pittsburgh nurse, who was a member of the club, the Graduate Nurses' Association of District No. 6 and their friends will meet in the clubhouse this evening and will be addressed by Judge Sarah Soffel. There will also be music. Officers have been elected by the nurses as follows: President, Mary E. Walton; vice presidents, Edna Wagner, Mary Hallisey and Margaret Irlbacker; secretary-treasurer, Hilda Schuetz; directors, Birde Phelan, Mary B. Miller, Josephine Denby, Ruth Bower, Mrs. J. F. Roth and Helen Pratt.

Nurse's Memorial

The Nurses' Association will have a benefit theater party at the Pitt on Monday night to see "It's a Wise Child."

* * *

Miss Marie Moore is chairman of the card party which Roosevelt Chapter No. 264, Order of the Eastern Star, will have in Moose Temple tomorrow evening.

* * *

Schenley Review No. 140, Woman's Benefit Association, will hold a card party at Moose Temple Friday evening, February 20.

* * *

Mrs. Henry M. Hallett is one of the patronesses for the benefit theater party which Ben Avon Chapter, Young Women's Christian Association, will hold at the Bellevue Theater tomorrow. "The Princess and the Plumber" is the film which was chosen because of its appeal to school children for whom special transportation arrangements are being made.

Mrs. Hallett

* * *

"Sharing the World" is the title of the talk which Miss R. Louise Fitch will give at the international luncheon of the American Association of University Women Saturday at the Hotel Schenley. Mrs. Edward O. Tabor, in costume, will sing three groups of songs of other nations, and Mrs. R. C. McKelvey, president of the organization, will conduct a roll call of nations.

* * *

These officers have been elected by the Rockledge Garden Club: President, Mrs. Alexander P. Lindsey (re-elected); Mrs. R. D. Beardsley and Mrs. B. M. Herr, vice presidents; Mrs. F. L. Doering, recording secretary; Mrs. W. B. Laufman, corresponding secretary. Mrs. William H. Mercur, of the Allegheny County Garden Club, will lead a general gardening discussion at the next meeting of the club on March 9.

Officers Elected

* * *

The semi-monthly meeting of the Pittsburgh Business and Professional Women's Club will be held next Thursday in the Congress of Clubs. Miss Mary Jane Paul will give a one-act play—which will conclude her series of five talks on "Glorifying the American Girl's Voice."

The president, Miss Jewel Foley, together with several other members, will attend the lecture given by Froken With, Norwegian journalist, at the Malta Temple, New Kensington, tomorrow evening under auspices of the New Kensington Business and Professional Women's Club.

* * *

The last of the pre-Lenten card parties to be held at Council House of the Pittsburgh Council of Catholic Women will be a valentine party on Saturday afternoon. Mrs. L. P. Shea, chairman, will have as her aides Mrs. George J. Rudolph, Miss Rachel A. Good and Mrs. George Zeuger.

Miss Good

* * *

The fireside group meeting of Junior Hadassah will be held next Thursday evening at the home of Miss Anne Whitman, Stanton avenue. Miss Hilda Lieberman, a member of Hadassah, will review the works and life of Bialek, Hebrew poet. The February board meeting is scheduled for Monday evening at the Y. M. and W. H. A., and a studio tea is planned for February 26.

Foster has charge of tickets.

DARK FROCKS BRIGHTENED BY LINGERIE TRIMMING

Sketched in Paris

Paris Bureau,
Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

PARIS, Feb. 12.—The lingerie trim lingers with us. A fact for which most of us are duly thankful. For nothing is so crisp and refreshing as a simple black dress with snowy lingerie touches. It dignifies age and enhances the brightness of youth. And makes most of us wonder why the black dress with white touches was so rarely seen until recently. For years before that, it seemed to be the favorite wear of dignified elderly ladies and schoolgirls. But now we are making amends for our neglect by wearing this type of frock in black, blue or brown with white all the year round.

Special attention has been given to the fashioning of clever lingerie collars, jabots and cuffs, and in some cases a striking degree of individuality has been obtained without any sacrifice of the essential simplicity of this type of trimming. These touches soften the strictly tailored frock and by the same token lend a tailored look to the frock of softer aspect.

* * *

THE WHITE SUIT for Southern wear bids fair to become a most important fashion and no doubt some fortunate souls will allow themselves the luxury of wearing a white suit in town later on. It is so fresh and happy looking. The model shown on this page is by Worth and is of white flannel. The jacket is trimmed with brown astrakan frosted with white, very new and very lovely. Especially good are the simple lines of the slightly flared skirt with shallow, set-in godets. The blouse is white crepe de chine.

* * *

* * *

FIRST OF ALL there is the clever little white lingerie collar with separate tabs. Then next we have the lingerie bands which are placed about two inches above the edge of the sleeve at the wrist. This is a very practical idea, as it prevents immediate soiling, as is the unfortunate result when a lingerie cuff edges the sleeve. Then there is the snug little bolero cut high in front and the draped belt atop the hips, which is buckled in front. The lines of the skirt are most graceful.

K. OF C. MARK ANNIVERSARY

Ten councils of Knights of Columbus from the Chartiers and Beaver valleys attended a celebration marking the forty-ninth anniversary of the organization, held in Coraopolis headquarters last night. More than 250 knights were present.

The thirty-first anniversary of the Pittsburgh Council was recognized when the nine other councils represented presented an illuminated scroll to Dr. M. S. Creaven, first grand knight.

Judge John P. Egan and the Rev. James M. Delaney made addresses. The Allegheny Council Glee Club, James T. Winterling, director, and the Second District Orchestra, under Alphonson Lang, furnished entertainment.

MacGowan Speaker At Finance Meeting

The Rev. Dr. Robert MacGowan, pastor of the Bellefield Presbyterian Church, was the principal speaker at the banquet of the Pennsylvania Association of Personal Finance Companies in the William Penn Hotel last night. The banquet closed a one-day business session, at which speakers were Walter Dowling, of Ambridge, and C. J. Martin, of McKeesport.

Personal Meeting Speakers Announced

Oldway Tead, lecturer at Columbia University, will be the principal speaker at a meeting of two sections of the Pittsburgh Personnel Association in the Fort Pitt Hotel tomorrow. A banquet will be held at 6:30 p. m., at which the speaker will be M. L. Putnam, chief of the industrial research division, Western Electric Company, Chicago.

Westinghouse Gets Radio Test Permit

WASHINGTON, Feb. 12.—(AP)—The Radio Commission granted authority to WIXAX, of the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company, of Pittsburgh, to conduct experiments with a new transmitter for use in airplane communication with the station.

The Philadelphia Bureau of Police was granted an extension of time for completion of its radio station WPDP to March 1.

95-Cent Sale Leads To $10,000 Holdup

CHICAGO, Feb. 12.—(AP)—Samuel Schwartz, owner of a jewelry store, had closed up for the night when a woman rapped on the door, indicating she wanted to buy a 95 cent trinket. Obligingly he opened up the store.

As she walked out with the trinket, two men walked in the place. When they left they took with them $10,000 worth of jewelry.

BLAMES JILTED GIRL FOR 'RIDE'

The girl he jilted had him "taken for a ride" by four unidentified men who tossed him from their speeding machine after beating him and firing two shots at him at Wilkins avenue, Braddock Township, early this morning, Raymond Biagi, 25, of 1323 Ivanhoe street, said today.

Biagi, in the Braddock General Hospital, suffering from body bruises, shock and exposure, lay all night in the snow.

Biagi said he had been going with a girl who lives in Isabella street and that she threatened to have him "bumped off" when he told her he wouldn't marry her.

He said:

"I have moved several times in the last few weeks. I knew she meant it. Last night, after I had left the trolley car and was walking near Station street, an automobile drove up to the curb. Two men jumped out, slugged me and dragged me into the machine."

They drove him around for several hours, he said, then threw him from the car and fired at him. He feigned injury and they drove away, he said, after firing a second shot at him as he lay in the snow.

Biagi is employed by the Plaza restaurant. He would not reveal the identity of the girl, but gave her alleged address.

McMinn Sentenced For Flashlight Theft

Thomas McMinn, 54, of McClure avenue, Swissvale, convicted of stealing a $2.50 flashlight from the Sears, Roebuck store, East End, was sentenced today to three months to two years in the county jail. The jury recommended mercy for McMinn, who denied the charge and contended he was being framed.

Red Hurls Token At Magistrate, Fined $10

"Gentlemen, this is an outrage—"

That's as far as William Scarville, 38, Duff street, Negro, got when he attempted to address an audience of 50 in Magistrate Leo Rothenberg's Central Police Court today. Directed to face the judge and answer a charge of violating a city ordinance resulting from the sale of a Communist newspaper, Scarville was fined $10 or 10 days in jail.

Drawing a car check from his pocket, Scarville hurled it at the magistrate. Then he was hustled back to a cell.

Ward Off Sickness With This Wonderful Little

Flu-Fighting Machine

JUST PLUG IT INTO THE LAMP SOCKET AND BREAK UP A COLD

HOMES equipped with the new, improved Turpo Electric Vaporizer are well armed to combat the colds that may lead to grippe and influenza. Your druggist sells this wonderful little flu-fighting machine—and Turpo, the Flu-fighting ammunition that goes with it.

All you have to do is plug the cord into the light socket. In less time than it takes to boil water on your stove, you can breathe deep of Turpo's cold-combatting vapor, rich in the combined healing properties of turpentine, menthol and camphor.

The Turpo treatment is not only pleasant to young and old—it also works swiftly and safely. Relief is immediate. At the first deep breath, you will feel your head clearing. Congestion begins to loosen. Soon breathing becomes natural and easy, and shortly the cold breaks up.

Approved by Doctors

Doctors and Mothers, for many years, have recognized the power of vapor treatment to stop a cold. With Turpo, the nation's vaporizing ointment, and the Turpo Electric Vaporizer, this power is increased—and it is much simpler, easier and more economical to use it.

Get This Equipment Today

To ward off illness, prompt action is vital. Don't let colds take hold. Go to your neighborhood drug store today. Buy a jar of Turpo and the Turpo Electric Vaporizer. Put them on the job at once. And by all means remember this: if you think flu has attacked you, call in your physician immediately.

BONUS PROGRAM TAKES SHAPE

By WILLIAM S. NEAL,
International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 12.—A three-point veterans' relief program, backed by congressional Republican leaders, was emerging today from the fight launched for cash payment of the three and a half billions of soldiers' adjusted compensation certificates.

The program includes:

Increase of cash loans or partial payment of adjusted service certificates with a view of aiding needy veterans of the World War.

Granting of pensions to widows and children of World War veterans dying from non-service connected cause, the pension to be $20 to $30 a month for widows and $6 for each dependant child.

Enactment of $12,500,000 authorization for increase of Veteran's Bureau hospital facilities throughout the country.

The House Ways and Means Committee resumed consideration of soldiers' bonus measures today, with indications that it would promptly recommend a plan proposed by Representative Bacharach (Rep.) of New Jersey, increasing the cash loan value of the certificates from 22 to probably 50 per cent.

WABASH TUBE GIVES CITY NEW OUTLET

South Hills Traffic Project for Which County Bought Bridge, Tunnel

$3,000,000 PURCHASE VOTED

Railroad's Bridge and Tunnel Expected to Be Remodeled For Autos in 6 Months

A new traffic outlet to the South Hills within six months is planned by county commissioners in the double track bridge and tunnel of the Pittsburgh and West Virginia Railroad Company which they yesterday unanimously voted to purchase for $3,000,000.

A right-of-way of 60 feet extending south from Fourth avenue to the bridge approach, and ground at the south end of the Wabash tunnel to permit a connection with the Sawmill Run boulevard was included in the deal. The Wabash station and part of the train shed was reserved by the railroad.

$4,000,000 VOTED

The motion of the commissioners, put by E. V. Babcock and seconded by C. C. McGovern, authorized the purchase of the bridge and tunnel for $3,000,000, and provides for the sale of $4,000,000 worth of commissioners' bonds, the $1,000,000 excess to be used as far as is necessary in preparing the property to handle two-way motor traffic.

The motion to buy came suddenly. H. W. Nethken, vice president of the Pittsburgh and West Virginia Railroad, had reviewed the proposition and cut the railroad's price from $4,000,000 to $3,000,000. Vernon R. Covell chief engineer of the County Bureau of Bridges, had outlined the cost of putting the property in shape for use.

Babcock said:

APPROACHES PLANNED

"The question of getting down from the bridge to the downtown streets has been carefully studied and can be accomplished with ramps in Fourth avenue into Liberty avenue and Ferry street. The project will be available for traffic in five or six months, and I think the price is fair both to the county and the railroad."

Nethken then told commissioners that the cost of constructing a similar bridge and tunnel would be more than $5,600,000, compared with the $4,000,000 which they are putting into it.

County engineers immediately will design the approaches to the bridge and tunnel, and arrangements will be made with city authorities to place ramps in Fourth avenue, one turning out of Liberty avenue and the other from Ferry street.

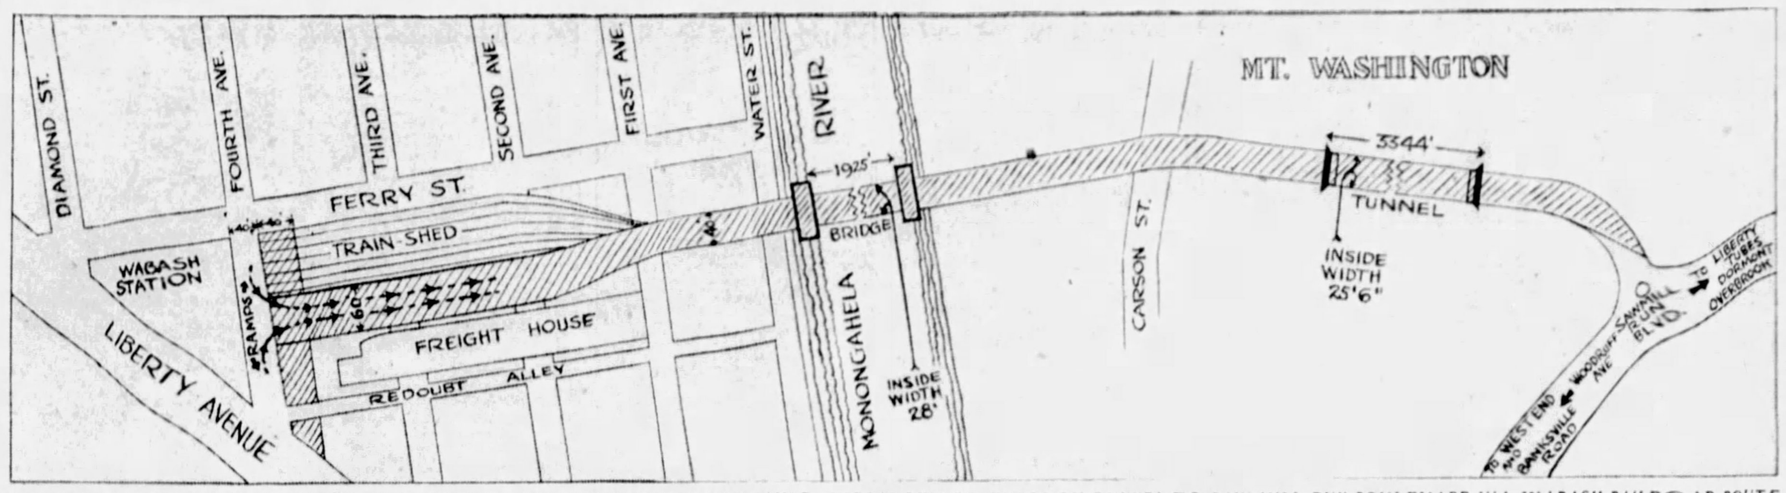
VENTILATION IS PROBLEM

The ramp will meet in a 60-foot approach which will rise gradually from Fourth avenue to a point near Second avenue, where it will taper down to the width of the present bridge approach, which is about 40 feet.

The tunnel is 25½ feet wide, measuring from the edge of one wall to the other. County engineers say this is wide enough to handle a north and south bound lane of automobile traffic, although there is a bad ventilation problem involved which must be carefully handled. The tunnel is 3,344 feet long.

Mr. Babcock pointed out that a ventilation shaft already exists in the tunnel and expressed the opinion that with some additional provisions it will handle the situation. The present air shaft is at Virginia avenue and Bertha street, Mt. Washington.

Commissioner Armstrong pointed out that the bridge and tunnel lend themselves well to the idea of another set of twin tubes in future years. He said that later it may be possible to provide an additional tube and to widen the bridge to take care of four lanes of traffic.



MAP OF PROPOSED ROUTE TO CARRY AUTO TRAFFIC FROM DOWNTOWN OVER RAMPS, ACROSS BRIDGE, THROUGH TUNNEL TO SAW MILL RUN BOULEVARD VIA WABASH RAILROAD ROUTE

SIDEWALKS —of— PITTSBURGH

By William Pfarr

Mr. Pfarr

The papers are hopping all over Mayor Kline because he has decreed that the investigation of Director Succop's conduct shall be secret, but the professional politicians are again applauding His Honor.

The Succop case offers an excellent example to explain the Mayor's political success: He never leaves a fellow-politician in the lurch. Let a ward chairman find himself in a jam and, if he is a Kline ward chairman, the Mayor will be the first to his ailing side. To the politicians the Mayor is a square-shooter; they cast their votes for him and in return he lends them succor in distress.

This is government of the people, by the people, and for the people—provided the people are politicians.

George Moriarty, the American League baseball umpire, has been in Pittsburgh making speeches to the school children. Moriarty is the umpire who once strode into the Detroit ball club's dressing room, walked up to Ty Cobb, with whom he had had a run-in on the field, handed Cobb a baseball bat and said:

"We're even now; let's go."

Cobb didn't go.

Moriarty likes to speak to the school children. He says they're good audiences. After one of his speeches a few days ago a boy, whose name probably was Finnegan or O'Reilly, walked up to Moriarty and said:

"Mr. Moriarty, will you sign my geography book?"

"Sure-mike," Moriarty said. "Where should I sign it?"

Three men buy a grindstone four feet in diameter, six inches wide at the circumference and 12 inches through at the center. They make a hole two inches square through the center for the axle. The grindstone is to be used until there is nothing left of it, each using a third and passing it on to the next man. What will be the diameter of the stone when it reaches the second man, and the third man?

We don't know. And R. D. Fraser, of Bradford, who submitted the problem, didn't tell us. Mr. Fraser read a paragraph we wrote about Mr. George Taber's ability to solve almost any such problem. Mr. Fraser not only doubts that Mr. Taber can solve this one, but that anybody else can. We give up.

* * *

We were planning to say a few words right now about doughnuts, but that'll have to wait because we have just now heard of the plight of Roy T. Clunk, who is an assistant district attorney on the one hand and a noted Beau Brummel on the other.

Clunk is a candidate who doesn't know what office to run for. In fact, he didn't intend to run for any office until yesterday, when he was smitten with an idea whose magnitude is as overwhelming as an avalanche of cornflakes. The idea was a slogan, in case he ever did run for office—a slogan which some day may glare at us from billboards—

"PLUMP FOR CLUNK, "THE BANJO CANDIDATE."

* * *

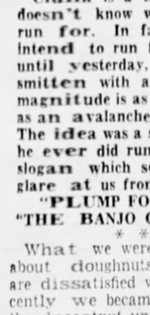
What we were going to say about doughnuts was that we are dissatisfied with them. Recently we became interested in the dougtnut until now we are more or less a doughnut expert; we can tell a doughnut at one glance. So it is the expert speaking when we say that we have yet to meet up with the doughnut that satisfies our peculiar needs. Either it is bloated or too thick, either it is flavored with too much sugar or too little; either it is thick with jelly, or thicker with dough, and we could go on like this for doughnut and doughnut. The blame for this condition is three-fold—one-fold on prohibition, another fold on the motor car and the third fold on, of course, the depression.

WILL ROGERS SAYS

FOREST CITY, Ark., Feb. 12.

To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

Along with all the other things wanted down in this county I found in Fort Smith, Ark., a unique case. A little circus is stranded there. It's got an elephant, and a lot of animals. The town is feeding the circus people, but this elephant, and these lions and tigers and all are about to eat the whole town out of funds. The elephant alone has eaten up their budget.



Will Rogers

They wanted them to sell 'em, but nobody would buy 'em. Now come on, you folks, and send some money to Fort Smith, Ark. Lots of folks can't seem to get excited over humans hungry, maybe they can over wild animals. The elephant hasn't seen a peanut since last summer. There is no fund, but we will create one. Send it to the mayor, and we will call it the "Stranded Circus Fund." Yours, WILL.

OIL FIRM AIDS JOB FUND

The first contribution from an industrial corporation to the fund of the Allegheny County Emergency Association for stabilization of employment was received today from W. L. Mellon, chairman of the board of the Gulf Oil Company.

The check represented the corporation's payroll for one day for all employes in the county, based on the year 1929, the plan under which contributions are solicited by the association from 3,000 employers of the county.

APPROVES PLAN

In a statement which accompanied the contribution, Mellon said:

"I am a firm believer in the Pittsburgh plan. In my opinion it is the most practical one for meeting the emergency and I am greatly interested in the successful accomplishment of the plan which has been undertaken."

BANDITS' FATE WITH JURY

The death penalty was asked today by the commonwealth for the three self-confessed Negro bandits as their joint trial for the murder of August F. Braum, West Elizabeth butcher, October 4, closed today in Criminal Court and the case went to the jury.

The defendants, Clarence Williams, Cleo Peterson and Robert Smith, all Negroes, took the stand late yesterday to deny they had murdered Braum, or had entered his butcher shop to rob him.

Williams admitted he fired the shots which struck Braum, but insisted he drew his revolver in self-defense after the butcher had thrown a knife and a cleaver at him.

Peterson and Smith said they ran from the place when Williams began shooting. They declared they entered Braum's shop to inquire about a friend they were seeking. All three admitted robbing the Price Brothers garage, Elizabeth, 20 minutes after the Braum shooting.

Pershing Prompt To Offer U. S. Aid As Foes Gained

MY EXPERIENCES IN THE WORLD WAR

By GEN. JOHN J. PERSHING,

Commander-in-Chief of the American Expeditionary Forces In the World War.

CHAPTER XXXII.

While Secretary of War Baker and I were at French General Headquarters at Compiegne March 21, 1918, we heard the heavy artillery fire which signalized the beginning of the long-expected German attack, although no definite news had then been received.

It will be recalled that the plan of the Supreme War Council, adopted in February, was to form a general reserve to be composed of 13 French, 10 British and seven Italian divisions. The British commander-in-chief contended, however, that in taking over from the French army the additional front opposite St. Quentin to Barisis in January he had to put in divisions that might otherwise have been available, and that he had none left for the general reserve. The directions regarding the reserves were not carried out, and an agreement between Haig and Petain as to mutual support was substituted in its stead.

Gen. Pershing

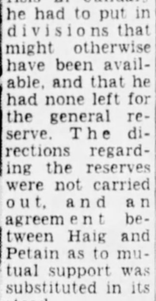
When these facts were made known to the Supreme War Council by the British commander-in-chief they occasioned much surprise. But the lack of divisions on the part of the British was explained to the Supreme War Council March 14 at its meeting in London, and the arrangement was accepted by the council as satisfactory.

Germans Strike British

The agreement was in substance the confirmation of the understanding between them as explained at the military conference in Compiegne in January.

The time had now come for the fulfillment of this agreement.

March 21 the great German offensive began against the British armies between the Oise and the Scarpe, near the junction of the French and British lines, on a front about 50 miles in length, extending from near La Fere to Arras. Near the center of the attack was Gen. Gough's Fifth Army, with the Third Army, under Gen. Byng, on its left.



Lord Byng.

The artillery bombardment preceding the infantry advance was of short duration, but of great intensity, with excessive use of gas shells. Following a heavy barrage, the German infantry, using the same tactical methods that had been so successful at Riga and Caporetto, delivered its blow. The weather favored the enemy, as a heavy fog continued intermittently for three days, much to the disadvantage of the defense.

The overwhelming force of 64 especially trained German divisions out of their 192 then on the Western Front compelled the British lines to yield. Although at the end of the first day the Fifth Army had not entirely given away, its losses had reached several thousands, and there was no question that the Germans were making a serious attempt to separate the British and French armies.

British Handicapped

While there seemed to be every confidence before the attack that the lines could hold, full consideration had not been given to the certain use of open warefare tactics by the Germans, in which neither the British nor the French had been sufficiently trained.

Adherence by the Allies on the Western Front to trench warfare methods proved advantageous to the Germans. Except for the Verdun affair of 1916 Germany had been on the defensive in the west, while completing the conquest of Russia and the Near East.

As expected, the collapse of Russia and the total defeat of Roumania released a large number of German divisions for the 1918 offensive in the west, where they gained numerical superiority for the first time since 1914. With this advantage they promptly began training for open warfare with the object of forcing their adversaries out of the trenches and beating them in the open.

In this sort of warfare the British were seriously handicapped on account of their long adherence to stabilized warfare. Their officers said that when the men had to leave the trenches they acted as though something was radically wrong in that there was not another trench somewhere for them to get into.

The last one of Gough's reserves was put in on the second day, yet he received no support to stop the widening gap in the British front until the following day, when one French infantry division and one French dismounted cavalry division arrived.

On the 24th four others got into position. These divisions and others that came in the next two or three days were put into battle by Gen. Fayolle without regard to the integrity of units or the order of their entry, some of them being very short of ammunition.

The British Fifth Army was evidently overwhelmed from the start, yet no British reinforcements were sent to Gough until the 24th, and then only one division, no others arriving during the first week. By the fifth day the German forces had driven a salient into the British front some 37 miles deep and were threatening the important railway center of Amiens, the capture of which would probably have made a complete breach between the French and British armies.

Lacked Reserves

In view of the agreement for mutual support, it is not clear why the British and French

COACH MODEL ON DISPLAY

The miniature model Napoleonic coach, from which the members of the Sun-Telegraph chapter of the Fisher Body Craftsman's Guild will build examples, is being exhibited today at the Charles M Schwab Vocational School, Homestead.

Tomorrow morning the model will be displayed at the New Kensington Chamber of Commerce and in the afternoon at the Logan Trust Company, New Kensington. Saturday morning it will be exhibited at Motor Square Garden, Baum boulevard, and in the afternoon at C. A. Rehtmeyer's showroom, Baum boulevard. Sunday it will be shown at the Glenshaw Presbyterian Community Church.

The winner of the contest, which is open to all boys between the ages of 12 and 19, inclusive, will be awarded with a four-year university scholarship valued at $5,000. Other prizes totaling $50,000 will be awarded.

Liquor Consigned To U. S. Embassy At Havana

WASHINGTON, Feb. 18.—(INS.)—Somebody in the American embassy at Havana has imported 98 cases of liquor from France, and the State Department is in a quandary about it.

Officials admitted today they had seen a copy of a ship's manifest which carried the information that the wines, whiskies and liquors were consigned to the "Ambassador des Etats Unis Amerique" at Havana from the port of Bordeaux, France.

Harry F. Guggenheim, a close friend of President Hoover's, is the ambassador at Havana.

NEW TENT USED TO SAVE CHILD

Joseph Vorchak, 3, of 1314 Forbes street, is fighting for life against pneumonia. He and his brother John, 6, and his baby sister Agnes, aged one year and three months, took sick with measles February 4.

Last Saturday Joe developed pneumonia.

Today Dr. J. J. McCarthy, 2016 Fifth avenue, called No. 1 police station for an inhalator. When No. 1's supply of oxygen was exhausted, Officers Robert L. Richman and Charles J. Zoog brought the Center avenue station inhalator to the boy.

Police operator notified the Mine Safety Appliances Company. Gus McClellan quickly brought an A. Chase pneumonia tent, a new device which generates a carbogen mixture of 93 per cent oxygen and 7 per cent carbon dioxide. It was the first time the new machine has been used.

SEEK VOTE MACHINES IN TIME FOR PRIMARY

COUNTY HEADS ASK DELIVERY BY AUG. 15

Decide on Immediate Bid Advertising, Refusing to Wait for Chicago Proposal

Voting machine specifications will be advertised at once for bids and county commissioners have placed a time limit in the contracts insuring delivery not later than August 15, one month ahead of the primary election.

The specifications, drawn in accordance with the decision of the State Supreme Court and with the act of assembly, have been approved. Companies bidding on the job will be asked to submit samples. The contract will be for 1,100 machines.

DELAY REFUSED

An effort to delay the bids on the machines until a Chicago firm would have opportunity to present detailed plans for a new type brought a firm refusal from commissioners. Commissioner Joseph G. Armstrong said:

"If this Chicago corporation has been in business for 40 years and has $50,000,000 in capital they should have been here before us with a definite proposition. I am for going ahead with our own business. We have bowed our head and bended our knees so much that we do not seem to have the authority of commissioners."

A dispatch from Harrisburg that Richard J. Beamish, secretary of the commonwealth, had granted the county an extension of time to consider the Chicago machines sponsored by Edgar J. Kaufmann, was disregarded by Armstrong on the ground that no word from Beamish was received by commissioners.

TIME LIMIT CITED

County Solicitor Mortimer B. Lesher also pointed out that the time limit in the act is mandatory and it is beyond the power of state officials to change it.

The Automatic Voting Machine Corporation of Jamestown sent a communication defending its product and pointing out difficulties a new firm would meet in getting into quantity production on short notice.

In the new contract, the successful bidder must furnish a patent infringement bond within one week after it is let. The contract bond has been made $200,000 instead of $100,000 and the deposit check increased from $10,000 to $20,000. The financial statement of the company and necessity of a demonstration of the machine have been left out of the contract although they still may be insisted upon by the commissioners.

Gas Firm Workers Injured; Man Hit by Auto, Alleged Reckless Driver Arrested

Three employes of the Peoples Natural Gas Company were in West Penn Hospital today as a result of injuries suffered when they were pinned by a truck while working in an excavation in Forbes street, near Craft avenue, late yesterday.

The three victims who suffered fractured ribs and internal injuries, were James Rice, 48, of 1320 Pasture street, H. W. Jenkinson, 30, of 70 Lafferty street, and Joseph Alto, 38, of 1039 Blackadore avenue. The men were working in the excavation when a truck owned by the American Reduction Company and driven by George Hamilton, 32, a Negro, of 2216 La-Place street, dropped into it after a collision with an automobile driven by G. W. Young, 55, of 100 Freeland street, police said. Both drivers escaped injury and were arrested, police reported.

Mike Johnson, 29, of 603 Ridge avenue, was bruised and cut when struck by an automobile at Federal street and Stockton avenue, North Side, last night. After treatment at Allegheny General Hospital he went to his home. W. H. McPherson, 29, a Negro, of 2048 Gironda street, alleged driver, was charged with reckless driving at North Side Police Station.

Sues for $10,000 Over Gas Explosion

Ralph Chivelli, of Avonmore, in a $10,000 suit filed in Common Pleas Court against the Peoples Natural Gas Company, charges the company turned the gas on at his house September 19 without notifying him. When he went to the cellar and struck a match to look at the water meter, he declares, an explosion occurred, burning his eyes and wrenching the porch.

STORE GUARDS TRAP SUSPECT

A youth trapped early today in the storeroom of the Federal Candy Company, 1334 Fifth avenue, by police and operatives of a protective company, was to be questioned in connection with robberies of other wholesale stores in the uptown.

A look-out escaped when operatives and police arrested the suspect, who gave his name as John Manning, 21, of Woodbourne avenue, Brookline.

Near the store, police said, they found an automobile which contained burglar tools. Manning was alleged to have stolen the car in the downtown district and put his own license plates on the machine.

INCLINE BRIDGE PLAN PUSHED

A City Council committee today was under instructions to arrange with the Duquesne Incline Operating Company for erection of a footbridge from the trolley loading platform to the second floor level of the incline building in Carson street.

Council action on the $18,000 item set up in the budget but delayed through failure of the public works department and incline company to reach an agreement, followed the appearance of Mrs. Della Hartner at yesterday's session. Mrs. Hartner, representing the Duquesne Heights Board of Trade, declared the incline company was ready to co-operate.

Stubborn Coughs Ended by Recipe, Mixed at Home

Here is the famous old recipe which millions of housewives have found to be the most dependable means of breaking up a stubborn, lingering cough. It takes but a moment to prepare, and costs little, but it gives real relief even for those dreaded coughs that follow severe cold epidemics.

From any druggist get 2½ ounces of Pinex, pour it into a pint bottle and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup or strained honey. (Sugar syrup can make a full pint of better remedy than you could buy ready made for three times the cost. It never spoils and tastes so good that even children like it.

Not only does this simple mixture soothe and heal the inflamed throat membranes with surprising ease, but also it is absorbed into the blood and acts directly upon the bronchial tubes, thus aiding the whole system in throwing off the cough. It loosens the germladen phlegm and eases chest soreness in a way that is really astonishing.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway Pine, containing the active agent of creosote in a refined, palatable form. Nothing known to medicine is more helpful in cases of distressing coughs, chest colds, and bronchial troubles.

HOMESTEAD FIRE CHIEF RESCUES AGED WOMAN

VICTIM FOUND OVERCOME BY SMOKE

Old First National Bank, Store And Apartments Damaged $35,000; Volunteers Aid

Fire Chief Hymen Samuels, of Homestead, and Mrs. Mary Fisher, 44, whom he rescued, were overcome by smoke, and two firemen were injured at a fire in the old First National Bank Building housing a store and four apartments at 211 East Eighth avenue, Homestead, early today. Loss was estimated at $35,000 by Chief Samuels.

Flames of undetermined origin spread from the basement of the Federal Army and Sports Goods Company to the roof of the three-story structure. Mrs. Fisher, who occupied a third-floor apartment alone, was trapped until Chief Samuels reached her. He took her downstairs to the street.

Fred Knauber, 26, of 827 Sarah street, West Homestead, street commissioner of that borough, who was aiding firemen, suffered a deep laceration of the right hand.

TOWN HALL SITE HEARING UP TOMORROW

Opponents of the Nicola site in the Schenley Farms district for the new Town Hall today were preparing arguments for presentation at a public hearing tomorrow before City Council.

Headed by former Mayor William A. Magee and James Chaplin, of the Allegheny County Town Hall Association, the protestants against the Oakland site will ask Council to refuse passage of the consent ordinance presented this week.

It is expected Council will take definite action next week.

Magee, asked what the basis of his talk to Council would be, said he would use the same arguments he presented to the County Commissioners a short time ago.

The offer of the Duquesne Garden Company to sell its property at Fifth avenue and Craig street to the county for a town hall site at $5.50 a square foot was read to the County Commissioners yesterday. Chairman Joseph G. Armstrong ruled that the matter has already been settled as far as the board is concerned.

E. V. Babcock said representatives of St. Paul's Cathedral had protested against the use of the Garden property for a town hall.

'NUMBERS' MEN SEEK LEADER

"Numbers" men today continued their frantic search for a Moses to lead them back into the promised land from which they strayed when they divided, went on many different racket bases.

Outsiders guessed today that they are being disciplined by their former leaders, the "Three Wise Men" of the Hill district. Memories of past agreements, broken before the ink was dry, are given as reason for the leaders' failure to act.

Several statistics upon which it is posible for the racket to work are known by all. Why no action has been taken to date has not been answered. Some say it is because the leaders are divided, others say it is lack of foresight, still others say they are waiting the time when the entire racket will be willing to get behind the same wagon and push.

Skinner and Merivale, Masters of Make-Up, Must Work Hard

By GEORGE SEIBEL.

Two masters of stage make-up are playing in Pittsburgh theaters this week. Otis Skinner, as bartender on the Marseilles water front, has to get into his appearance all the spirituous quality he can. Philip Merivale, as the human avatar of the Grim Reaper, does not want to be just as spiritual as possible. Each actor solves his problem in admirable fashion. Otis Skinner makes everybody feel like taking a drink while Philip Merivale has boomed the Pittsburgh Symphony Orchestra.

[illegible] West, known as "the personification of [illegible] coming to the Alvin [illegible] Monday [illegible] the musical comedy, "Simple Simon." Prominent in his support is Harriet Hoctor, former dance star of "The Three Musketeers" and "The Show Girl."

"It's a Wise Child," to be presented by George Sharp at the Pitt next week, presents the story of a little white lie a girl tells in an effort to rid herself of a distasteful suitor. She plunges the whole family into a whirlpool of trouble by telling it.

For the fourth time Lewis Stone heads Greta Garbo's supporting cast in "Inspiration," her newest starring feature which the Penn will present beginning tomorrow. Stone first appeared with Miss Garbo in "A Woman of Affairs," following this with "Wild Orchids" and "Romance." Robert Montgomery has the romantic lead in "Inspiration," marking his initial appearance with Miss Garbo.

James Rennie, who plays the leading male role in Barbara Stanwyck's latest starring vehicle, "Illicit," coming to the Stanley screen tomorrow, is in private life the husband of Dorothy Gish.

Charlie Murray, George Sidney, Vera Gordon and Kate Price, the original "Cohens and Kellys," are featured in the latest talking screen comedy of the funny quartet, "The Cohens and Kellys in Africa," which opens a week's engagement in the Fulton and Sheridan Square theaters tomorrow.

"The Great Meadow," adapted to the talking screen from the historical novel of the same name by Elizabeth Madox Roberts, is the feature screen attraction coming tomorrow to the Aldine. The featured players are John Mack Brown and Eleanor Boardman.

5,000 IN CAST

More than five thousand people were used in the filming of Edna Ferber's "Cimarron," now on the Warner screen. Wesley Ruggles directed the piece.

"Captain Thunder," featuring Fay Wray, Victor Varconi and Natalie Moorehead, will open Saturday on the Harris screen. There will be vaudeville acts on the stage.

"Let's Go," featuring Evelyn Meyers (Bumps) Mack and George Murray, will open in the Academy Sunday night with a midnight show.

"Men on Call," with Edmund Lowe, Mae Clark and William Harrigan, comes to the Enright screen tomorrow and to the Davis Saturday. The locale is the rocky coast of California. New vaudeville acts will be an added feature in the Davis. The Enright will have a Dick Powell show.

Marie Dressler and Polly Go in for Politics In New Comedy

(Copyright, 1931, by Premier Syndicate.)

HOLLYWOOD, Feb. 11.

Women in politics will occupy the attention of Marie Dressler and Polly Moran in their next co-starring comedy at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

In a story tentatively known as "The Mayor of Cicero," Marie will be seen as a feminine candidate, and Polly will be her advance publicity agent. The picture will be directed by Charles (Chick) Reisner, who did "Reducing."

Marie Dressler

Production will be delayed for at least a month to allow Miss Dressler to enjoy a complete rest from her film duties. She sailed Sunday for Honolulu.

COMFORT CAME FIRST

NO VACATION FOR HOLMES

The young actor, son of Taylor Holmes, is in the cast of five forthcoming Paramount films. Three of these, "An American Tragedy," "Confessions of a Co-Ed" and "Blind Mice," will be with Sylvia Sidney, the Broadway newcomer whom Paramount apparently is grooming for a star. The other two are "The Man I Killed," with Emil Jannings, and "So This Is New York," the Robert Sherwood comedy in which Lois Moran recently played on Broadway.

Phillips Holmes

Since the Warner raid, Paramount has instituted a big publicity campaign for its young players. Sylvia Sydney and Carmen Barnes, both newcomers to the films, are being touted like stars.

LATEST GOSSIP

Mary Miles Minter, erstwhile cinema light, and Joseph Diszkay, the Hungarian tenor, have been seen constantly together for a number of months. . . . Charles Rogers, the new boss at Pathe, is confronted with a situation that will be a test of his undoubted ability. Both Ann Harding and Constance Bennett are dissatisfied with their contracts. Tay Garnett would like to accept other offers and Edward Griffith could go to any one of three or four studios. Fortunately, Mr. Rogers is an executive of considerable experience and therefore used to grief. . . . If "East Lynne" is a success, Fox will launch a talkie version of "St. Elmo," with Warner Baxter as star. . . . Proving that producers do have hearts, Charles Farrell asked Winfield Sheehan for a two weeks vacation and Sheehan countered: "Why not take a real vacation, make it three months." As a result Charlie is happily off to Europe. . . . New York officials of Radio Pictures have okayed the initial reels of "Creation" and Harry Hoyt will make it into a feature picture. This film employs the prehistoric animals, such as Hoyt used in "The Lost World." . . . The peak in title changes is reached with R-K-O's decision to switch "Room and Board" to "Board and Room." . . . Sydney Blackmer is leaving for the East to persuade Mrs. Blackmer (Lenore Ulric) to come to Hollywood this summer and make two films.

POTENT STRATEGY

A Hollywood writer used a novel method to combat the pressure which a Hollywood studio brought on its employes to eat in the restaurant on the lot.

He showed up, as requested, but objected to the food and sent it back to the kitchen. After this was repeated four times, the cafe manager appealed to the studio executive with the result that the writer now eats where he wishes.

Portrait of a Man Talking to Himself

What a thrill it was at the George M. Cohan the other premiere night . . . When Mr. Chaplin's "City Lights" triumphed and made the best-lighted thoroughfare in the world so much brighter . . . Before a selected group of the Stem's Sophs, it romped into their hearts and touched them so deeply, at times, it made them weep. And if they didn't, then their throats ached from trying to suppress their emotions . . . What a sentimentalist he is! . . . When he isn't cracking your ribs in two with this silly or that one . . . I never laughed so loud or long! . . . I never enjoyed a talkie so much as I enjoyed the "City Lights," softy . . . It doesn't matter to me what is the matter with the picture . . . I mean, what the technicians argue is the matter with it . . . It is an achievement! . . . A superb amusement! . . . For nearly two hours it made me dismiss from my aching head all the minor bruises that come with The Struggle.

What a grand satisfaction it must have been to Chaplin to sit among his critics and hear them join in the Bravos! . . . After all the years, too, of patiently striving to prove that the commotion flickers could never erase the pantomime—providing they were done in the artful and adroit manner . . . George Jean Nathan, who rarely frequents the chin-emas, came in his elevated bonnet and studs . . . Ziegfeld appeared to enjoy it emotionally . . . Mr. Woollcott yelled, yipped and yahooed it! . . . Some of us were so touched by the blind girl angle that the compelling finish flooded the orbs, making it difficult to see the very last snapshots . . . Chaplin tears at your guts and then rips you wide open, that's what he does . . . The tougher-skinned, however, would have you believe it is all so much hokum . . . All right, then. So it is! . . . Call it Ho-no-ho-kum, however . . . More amusing to me, though, was observing Morris Gest, who occupied an aisle pew in the rear of the lower floor . . . During the cheering at the denouement, he seemed to be the only "master of art" who didn't applaud . . . Probably Morris was too spellbound . . . I prefer to think that, anyway.

The next time I see Bob Garland I must tell him what a grand piece of last paragraph he penned in his Saturday stint . . . The most delightful wordage I have read in seasons . . . Well, it is good to see in the Journal that Miss Marilyn Miller, in Paree, told reporters that she is going to marry Fred Astaire . . . When I jotted down that item in a gossip bureau ever so many Mondays ago, Adele, his sister, and Fred, too, got dramatic about the "inaccuracy." Wonder what became of that trial in Judge Mulqueen's court . . . I mean the one in which an interior decorator complained that two gals, Ruth Bennett and Helene Lane, of 162 West 97th Street, had tried the extortion scheme on him—or they would "tell all to Winchell" . . . Heheheh—what next? . . . If they are found guilty I trust His Honor will put them on strawberries (without sugar) for two years! . . . Flagrant evils cure themselves by being flagrant.

Virginia Cherrill, Chaplin's leading lady, and June MacCloy, of "Reaching for the Moon," are dead ringers . . . Poor Belle Livingstone . . . The day she steps out of the jailhouse she will be yanked back into the Federal Bldg., on another charge . . . Charlie King does have a trying time with the range in "Where Have You Been?"

Former Film Star Granted Divorce

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 12.—(AP.)—Florence Lawrence, well known in motion pictures more than a decade ago, was granted a divorce from Charles B. Woodring, Hollywood cosmetic manufacturer, on grounds of desertion.

She said Woodring left her in December, 1929, saying he loved another woman. They were married in 1921. A property settlement was reached, giving each a half interest in their cosmetic business.

FOR

ordinary handkerchiefs found unsafe

Handkerchief used once may be source of constant self-infection if used again

KLEENEX IS SAFE!

You use . . . then discard

Why doctors advise Kleenex

THOUSANDS have found Kleenex more convenient than handkerchiefs — and now comes convincing proof of the health importance of these tissue 'kerchiefs!

Laboratory tests show the old-time handkerchief a source of constant self-infection if used during a cold. Handkerchiefs used during colds were tested—and found to contain up to 4,170,000 disease germs. Think of carrying this germ-carrier about in purse or pocket! Think of putting it in a laundry bag, to scatter infection through every garment it touches. Think of touching it to your face. . . .

Utterly new-type handkerchief

Kleenex gives the world a disposable handkerchief. A handkerchief so low in cost it need be used but once—then discarded.

Thus, you throw away the germs that fill your handkerchief during colds. Those potent organisms of infection that not only live, but multiply in handkerchiefs during colds.

Kleenex is a soft, immaculate, super-absorbent tissue. It's the size of a handkerchief. And gentler, more delicate, than any handkerchief you ever used! It seems actually to soothe the tender, inflamed skin. There's no chance of irritation, as from the damp, soiled handkerchief. Kleenex is ideal for children.

The use of Kleenex will materially reduce your laundry bill. You can use many individual Kleenex handkerchiefs for the cost of merely laundering one handkerchief.

You buy Kleenex in Cellophane-sealed packages. Each tissue is as completely sanitary as it looks—and its snowy whiteness is a joy to see.

BACTERIOLOGICAL TESTS SHOW:

1. That handkerchiefs used by persons having colds may contain as many as 4,170,000 germs per handkerchief. The organisms included in the enumeration are those associated with colds, such as the Staphylococcus aureus, and Pneumococcus.

2. That organisms representative of those associated with colds, when impregnated upon linen and rinsed in boiling water and soap water were not killed nor appreciably inhibited from growing.

These tests were performed in the laboratory of a former professor of bacteriology at Northwestern University Medical School.

What science says about the ordinary handkerchief

1. It may self-infect the user time after time.
2. Spread infection among others.
3. Infect clothing in which carried.
4. Infect clothing in laundry bags (germs survive for days.)

Many other uses

Kleenex has many other uses that make it an essential in the modern household. Beauty experts claim these absorbent tissues remove cold cream and cosmetics more completely than is possible with towels or "cold cream cloths." Kleenex is so powerfully absorbent that the pores are safely cleared of all impurities. It saves towels from cosmetic stains and grease.

Ask for Kleenex at any drug, dry goods or department store. Comes in three sizes: 25c, 50c and $1.00; in pastel tints (guaranteed pure) as well as white. The coupon will bring a generous sample.

How Much Should Bashful Lover Be Encouraged?

How far should a Nice Girl go to encourage a "Faint-Hearted Freddy"?

Caroline's sweetheart, and she isn't the first one. According to the Boy's Friend, Big Sister, he's crazy about me. And his Mother, and Dad, and all the rest of the family, I suppose.

But not a sheep from Freddy himself, though he comes around regularly and has most of the usual symptoms. But he has peculiar ideas. He thinks that ladies should do the encouraging.

Has Strange Ideas

Is that a cue for Caroline to do her stuff? Or is it just a smoke screen? Yes, it is, I'm afraid. Here's Caroline's problem:

"Dear Miss Martin:

"I want to ask you something. But I guess I had better explain from the beginning so you'll understand what it's all about. Several months ago I made the acquaintance of a girl with whom I have become very chummy. She happens to have a brother who is an attorney and very successful, and I have gotten acquainted with him, too. Some time ago I invited both to my home for an evening of bridge, and since then I have been to their home and they to mine a lot of times. We three have been to other parties, too, and out driving. He and his sister are great pals, and she keeps telling me what a wonderful opinion he has of me and how much he thinks of me. And she tells me, too, how much their mother and father think of me.

"Now here's the part that has me puzzled. He is different from most of the fellows that I know. From the way he talks, I know that he has not been much in the company of women. I don't know whether it is just an inferiority complex of what, but somehow he has peculiar ideas about girls. He believes that encouragement in a love affair should come first from the girl, and then the man can act accordingly.

Puzzled About Him

"Do you think that I should encourage him? His sister seems to be taking the role of a female 'John Alden' now, continually telling me how wonderful he is, and how well he thinks of me, and so forth. And she invites herself, her brother and her mother and dad to visit my home. Of course I really like this, because they're lovely people, but the whole things has me up in the air.

"Just what can I do? How far should I go to let him know that his attentions would be welcome? I have already been very nice to him and if he still remains faint-hearted, what else can I do? I certainly can't ask him to take me out. Once he did ask me, and but at that particular time it was impossible for me to accept, and I thought he understood the circumstances. Do you suppose he didn't? Do you suppose he thought I didn't want to go?

"He is an awfully nice person, well educated and interesting and attractive, just the type of man I've dreamed of, and I could like him a lot if he would show some action.

"But what can I do the way things are? Have you any suggestions?

CAROLINE."

Have I any suggestions? Plenty of them, sister, but I can't guarantee that any of them will work. For I'll admit I never practiced much on these coy ones. Personally I prefer self-starters. But this lad may have points. And at any rate if you like the model I'm rooting for you.

Must Change Methods

Suppose for a while you don't see quite so much of the family. Seems to me he's been getting a lot of gratis attention with no effort on his part. Make yourself a little more occasional. For remember this—regardless of his ideas, if he really wants to see you, he'll find a way.

Make yourself harder to see. And make yourself harder to understand when he does see you. How about developing a secret sorrow? I've heard it works fine with some of the boys, though personally I've never been able to put it over. I always snicker, just when things are getting good. But try it, anyway. And if you can't look like a Blasted Hope, at least be mysterious. Make him realize that you have a few interests in life besides him. Be gay and friendly, but a little—quite a little—remote. Produce a few other admirers as well as some other interests. Put value on yourself, honey. Don't let Big Sister hand you around like a free sample of mush.

And if that doesn't work—

If, in spite of all your friendly encouragement and your alluring discouragement, he still doesn't start—

Well, do you want to devote the rest of your life to nudging him along?

'THOUGH LOST TO SIGHT'

Drawn by Nell Brinkley

"Though lost to sight—to memory dear!" These are ghosts you are a-looking at dear sirs—ghosts of girls who used to wait in Peacock Alley only a few short years ago. Ghosts of legs we should be saying—for the girls are still in the Peacock Alleys—but there is only a memory left of how they appeared, decoratively speaking, from the knees to the pretty shoesoics.

You might call this picture of a row of ghosts several titles besides "though lost to sight—to memory dear!" Such as—"Gone are the days!" "— Gone—but not forgotten—dear me no!"

Some of us do not regret these ghosts—this ghost picture that we all can remember if we shut an eye—of rows of feminine legs where ever we looked! For—alas the custom of dresses WAY above the knee had its drawbacks. It should have been a fashion ONLY for the very young—and the very lucky in the matter of walking accessories! There were plenty of unluckies! If you remember.

No—those of us who were sensitive to line—and mass—suffered in Peacock Alley. And on the subway. It was not all a joy to the eye. And more men than women believed were line sensitive, got hardened to the perpetual parade of unlovely underpinnings, and welcome with a perked-up interest the again-peeping ankle and dainty foot, with the rest veiled in mystery.

Lost to sight—as they should be save for fleeting moments—to memory dear—and all the dearer for being hard to view!

CORRECT MANNERS

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Details of the Simple Home Wedding

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. I am planning to have a simple home wedding. Where do the bridesmaids and best man stand during the ceremony?

2. If the bride comes in with her father, does the groom come in alone?

3. When do the bridesmaids and best man come in?

4. In a double ring ceremony who carries the rings, if there is no ring bearer?

5. Is it necessary for the bride and groom to stand under a bell? WONDERING.

1. The bride maids and maid of honor or matron of honor (one or all) stand on the left of the bride. The best man stands on the right, on the right of the groom.

2 and 3. First the clergyman enters alone and takes his position facing the guests. Then the groom and his best man enter, together, and they take their place on the right, facing the door through which the bride and her father are to enter. Then comes the bridal attendant, who walks to the left and takes her place. Last come the bride and her father.

4. The best man.

5. No, it is not necessary or customary.

A Word Often Mispronounced

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Will you please settle an argument? What is the proper pronunciation for the word suite, referring to furniture and rooms? I hope it is not "sweet" it sounds wrong.

MARGARET.

I'm sorry to have to disappoint you, for the pronunciation of suite is "sweet." And it won't sound wrong when you get used to saying it that way. In fact, then the other pronunciation that we sometimes hear will sound wrong.

Office Etiquette

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

In talking over the telephone (in an office) should a young lady say: "This is Miss Jones," "This is Mrs. Jones," or should she say "This is Claire," or "This is Ruby?" I think she should say: "Miss Jones" and they nearly slaughtered me in this office when I suggested this. We certainly have some life trying to live up to the rules and regulations of etiquette.

BOBBY.

You are right. Of course you should say: "This is Miss Jones" or "This is Mrs. Smith." And if they try to slaughter you again—just run to my column and I'll protect you!

Love's Reawakening

Continuation of Love's Awakening

By ADELE GARRISON

Madge and Lillian Play Role of Chaperon

Neither Mary nor Noel had heard me come into the Underwood apartment and for a second Lillian and I looked at the absorbed young couple with the romantic pleasure with which happily married women always view youthful sweethearts. Then with one accord we tiptoed out of the living room into Lillian's bedroom. She shut the door noiselessly and turning smiled at me.

"They don't know we're on earth," she said. "For that matter as far as they are concerned just now the world is uninhabited. It's a pity to disturb them, don't you think? Let them dream on at least until Purnell comes up after the breakfast tray. But you look a little grim about the lips, dear heart. What were you doing, worrying about Mary?"

"Yes, I was," I admitted, shamefacedly, "although I might have known she was over here. But I'm a bit surprised at Mary. I didn't think she'd come over here—"

Lillian startled me with the hearty infectious laugh she sounds only when she is tremendously amused.

"Turn over on your side," she admonished me in the carefully anxious tone of a mother trying to awaken a child from a nightmare. "You're all right. You're living in the year 1930 instead of 1850. If Mary had been so indelicate a female," to quote any author of that period, as to come to an abode which sheltered the young man of her choice, you could bear up under the shock. But let me assuage your Puritan fears. Mary no doubt was awakened by her uneasiness for Noel, because she was up and dressed when I went over to your apartment a few minutes ago. But she was properly coy, even reluctant, when I insisted upon her going back with me to breakfast with Noel. I think she had visions of your displeasure, but when I told her the truth, that Noel had been awake for an hour, counting the minutes until he could see her, she beat it over here with me."

"Don't be absurd!" I snapped, flushing under her raillery. "It was very nice of you to invite her to breakfast, but I haven't time to express my gratitude properly. It's after 10, and I haven't yet telephoned Mrs. Brixton. Her young people surely must be up by now."

"If they weren't 15 minutes ago, Harry will have awakened them by now," she said with a gamin grin. "You should have seen him when he started out in his riding togs. Purnell was delivering the mail, and he was overcome almost to the point of tears. That darky sure does love his folks to be quality, and the Prince of Wales had nothing on Harry—in appearance—and less than zero in riding technique."

Her voice was full of the absurd pride which a wife takes in her husband's accomplishments no matter whether she be an unsophisticated little country girl or an experienced woman of the world. I rose to the occasion valiantly.

"How proud Marion will be of him," I said, and was rewarded by the gratified look which she turned upon me.

"She is getting fond of him, isn't she?" There was more assertion than query in her words, but I answered both with emphasis.

"'Getting' isn't the word. I heard her tell Carolyn that she was 'simply tacky' about her stepfather."

"And she has called him Dad?" Lillian supplemented in a tone which showed the importance she attached to Marion's use of the word which her mother had feared she never would use.

"That particular problem of yours is solved," I told her. "Please—" I hesitated.

"Out with it," she said. "It's 'something for my own good.' I know by the cut of your jib. But I'll swallow any medicine this morning."

"It's only this," I said resolutely. "Please make yourself believe that Harry is in exactly the same position of care and authority that Marion's own father would have been were he living and—"

"And worthy," Lillian said crisply, and I saw the little etched lines of bitterness around her mouth which the mention of Tom Morton always brings there. "Of course, I'm doing that. What makes you think—"

"I'm not," I disclaimed hastily. "I'm only foreseeing a possible time when Harry's judgment and yours concerning Marion might run counter to each other. And—honestly—dear, I believe his would be more impartial, less prejudiced—"

Tomorrow's Horoscope

Friday, February 13

The astral testimonies for progressive and prosperous conditions are uppermost in this day's planetary chart. There is every promise of growth, expansion and gratifying financial returns in business, especially in new undertakings and plans, and the auguries for personal happiness, preferment and prosperity are definite. It is a time for pushing vigorously toward high goals in position and prestige, although these may entail some abrupt upheavals or unforseen readjustments.

Those whose birthday it is may look for a year of splendid progress and prosperity, with business as well as personal affiliations bringing much satisfaction. Finances should increase, business expand and personal preferment and prestige spell honors and fulfilled ambitions. It is a time for pushing to such goals.

A child born on this day may have excellent abilities and attributes for attaining success and high position in life, with distinction, prestige and high personal standing in social as well as business associations.

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

Scrub Face for a Good Complexion.

Not long ago I talked with the owner of a "beauty parlor." She is an unusually intelligent person and I was much impressed by her common sense views regarding the skin.

I want my readers to have the benefit of what this good woman told me. If all or some of these suggestions are followed, they cannot be otherwise than helpful to the sufferer from a bad skin.

Dr. Copeland.

I had spoken of the remarkable output of one American soap maker. This firm produced and sold last year 96,000 tons of soap.

"Oh! I am so glad to hear that," said the lady. "Too little soap and water are used by the people. Cleanliness, the cleanliness that comes from scrubbing the skin with soap, water and a rough wash rag, are essential to a good complexion."

Then we talked about the skin eruptions, particularly the acne and blackheads so many boys and girls have. "If only these children would scrub their faces and then leave on the surface to dry in a lot of the lather of common, yellow laundry soap," she said, "they are on the way to a speedy recovery of normal skin.

"After the soap has dried, yellow vaseline should be applied, right on top of the dried soap. This is left on all night and scrubbed off by vigorous washing in the morning." That, the lady said, will soon end the acne.

Then we talked about "alopecia," that peculiar form of localized baldness from which some persons suffer. There is just a patch of scalp disease that causes a loss of hair from a spot the size of a silver dollar, or larger. The doctors call it "alopecia areata."

"If this area is soaked night and morning with a 2 per cent formaldehyde solution, dried, painted with iodine and then smeared with yellow vaseline twice a day, the trouble will disappear in two weeks." Thus said the lady.

If you try these sensible measures and are greatly benefited, I wish you would write me about it. If we can help even a few of the people who have been embarrassed by marred skin, it will add to the sum total of human happiness.

Household Hints

Use a small steel bodkin for joining the seams of a sweater and you will find it much easier than a large-eyed needle.

After frying onions, pour a little vinegar into the frying pan while it is still hot to remove the odor; this also removes fish odor. Or sprinkle a little oatmeal in the pan and shake it over the fire till the meal begins to scorch.

When packing dresses in trunks or suitcases, place tissue paper in the sleeves and between folds to prevent creases.

Always wash and wipe apples that have been lying in the cellar before eating, as they are covered with an imperceptible mold.

The Beauty Box

By HELEN FOLLETT

To develop the bust measurement stand erect, swing the arms around in circles, first one and then the other. Place hands on hips, lift up on the toes, inhale, come down on the heels and exhale. Massage at night with coca butter; bathe every morning with cold water. A little yodeling doesn't do any harm; fills out the lunks, expands the chest.

Sculptured curls trailing along the nape of the neck as a fringy finish for the up-to-la-la coiffure are a chic note, but they haven't vitality or staying powers. They lose spirit and unsculpt themselves at the wrong moment. These are not the days when the femme can spend an hour making her toilette, with half that time given over to coddling a magnificent hairdress. Coiffures are girlier with stray curly-cues here and there, but they stay pretty well moulded to the head and fussy effects are still suggestive of dowdiness.

Katisha boasted and bragged about her pretty elbows. If she had pretty elbows she was entitled to yodel. Few women have them. Few women do anything to make their elbows presentable. Rough skin usually covers the hinges of the arms, and it needs frequent anointing with a heavy massage cream. If bones show up sharp points, massage is especially needful. Dimpled elbows are among the rarest of beauty blessings.

When the mouth is pretty it may be accentuated with a suggestion of coloring, a faint tinting with lipstick of natural tone. When the mouth is not well outlined or attractive, it is best undecorated. Rouge calls attention to defects, thickness of the lips, or a discontented expression. A rouged mouth with the lips drawn down is a beauty contradiction; the color bespeaks youth and vitality, the expression is that of old age and lost illusions.

Doctor's THREE RULES

Big Help to Constipated

WHAT a joy to have the bowels move like clockwork, every day! It's easy, if you mind these simple rules of a famous old doctor.

1. Drink a big tumbler full of water before breakfast, and several times a day.
2. Get plenty of outdoor exercise without unduly fatiguing yourself.
3. Try for a bowel movement at exactly the same hour daily.

Everyone's bowels need help at times, but the thing to use is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. You'll get a thorough cleaning out, and it won't leave your insides weak and watery. This family doctor's prescription is just fresh, lovable, herbs, pure pepsin and other mild ingredients that could not hurt even a child. But how it wakes up those lazy bowels! How good you feel with your system rid of all that poisonous waste matter.

Clean up that coated tongue, sweeten that bad breath and get rid of those bilious headaches. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin will soon free the bowels from waste. You'll eat better and sleep better, and feel better all over. Generous bottles at all druggists.

PERSHING SHOWS ALLIES WORRIED AS FOES GAINED

MADE PROMPT OFFER OF U. S. FORCES

British Driven Back 37 Miles as Germans Attempt To Separate Two Armies

should not have had a greater number of reserve divisions within easy reach of the point of juncture. It seemed logical that the enemy should endeavor to separate the two armies by attacking at that point. In fact, our information for some time previous indicated that he intended to do so.

In the extension of the British front the French had gained several divisions for their reserves, but when the blow came none of them was near enough to be of immediate service.

The French staff seemed to fear that their front, especially that part near the Swiss frontier, might be the German objective, and this might account for the lack of French reserves near the junction of the two armies. Whether the general reserve would have been adequate or not, there is no doubt that the substitute agreement for mutual support did not fully meet the situation.

Gen. Petain

In the moment of greatest stress, when it seemed very doubtful whether the German advance could be stopped, Gen. Petain sent the following order to his armies:

"The enemy has hurled himself upon us in a supreme effort.

"He wants to separate us from the English so as to open the way to Paris. Cost what it may he must be stopped.

"Hold your ground! Stand firm! Our (American) comrades are arriving. All together you will throw yourselves upon the invader.

"The battle is on. Soldiers of the Marne, of the Yser and of Verdun, I call upon you. The fate of France hangs in the balance."

The reports from the front gave an extremely dark picture of disaster, and I felt we should do everything possible to render assistance. It was to offer Gen. Petain such of our troops as could be used that I went to Campiegne March 25.

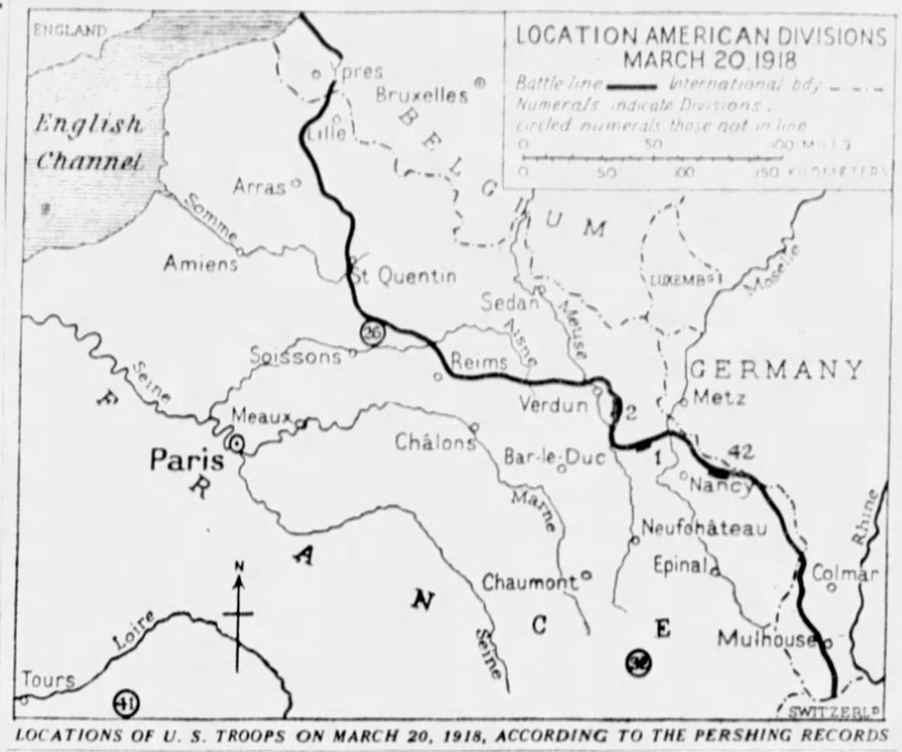
Americans Ready

The general's customary confident and nonchalant attitude was entirely gone, and he wore a very worried expression. I told him that for the moment I should waive the idea of forming the I Corps and that any of our divisions that could be of service were at his disposal, but with the qualifying remark that of course, we should look forward eventually to their assembly under their own commander.

Petain thought that certain of our units might be put into the battle, but he hesitated to give us at once a portion of the front that might become active, and preferred to have them sent into the quiet sectors to release French divisions, which amounted to the same thing as to numbers in the battle line.

We briefly discussed the general subject of handling new units as they should arrive, and finally I left with the understanding that American units would be used as circumstances might demand. As the reinforcement of the British was a vital necessity I was willing to accept any arrangement that would release French divisions for that purpose, or put our divisions into the battle if thought best. I gave orders at once that our units should be held in readiness for any eventuality.

March 24 it developed that the French divisions had received orders that if the enemy continued his drive in the direction of Amiens they were to fall back so as to cover Paris. Marshal Haig, fearing that this would result in separating the two armies, at once communicated the situation to his government. This brought about an important conference at Doullens, March 26, between members of the British and French governments, in which it was decided that some authority should be designated to co-ordinate the action of the two armies, and Gen. Foch was selected.



LOCATIONS OF U. S. TROOPS ON MARCH 20, 1918, ACCORDING TO THE PERSHING RECORDS

British Losses Heavy

I was not present at the Doullens conference, but upon warning of its action it seemed essential that Gen. Foch himself should know our desire to do what we could to strengthen the Allies. The British loss was then estimated at not less than 150,000.

Lord Northcliffe

I recall meeting Lord Northcliffe March 24 and found him almost unable to speak of it, so many of his friends had lost relatives. The depression among their people was probably worse than at any other period of the war.

Among the French there was much anxiety as to the safety of Paris, and again there was talk of the Government having to move to Bordeaux again, as it had done in 1914. The Allied lines had not been stabilized, and although I had offered our troops to Petain it seemed to me that it might be well to make it emphatic that I was ready to put into battle everything we could muster. I had often thought of the possibility of having to do this, and I went to find out the situation and let Gen. Foch know our attitude.

As we entered Gen. Foch's farmhouse headquarters near Clermont-sur-Oise, Clemenceau, Foch, Petain and Loucheur were intently studying a map spread out on the table. The situation was pointed out to me, showing that already the British had used 30 divisions and the French 17 against the Germans' 78. It seemed to be the opinion that the British Fifth Army was getting back on its feet and that the lines would hold for the time being.

French Enthused

I intimated that I had come to see Gen. Foch, and the others withdrew into the yard, leaving us alone. I told him that the Americans were ready and anxious to do their part in this crisis, that I was willing to send him any troops we had, and asked for suggestions as to how we might help. He was evidently very much touched, and in his enthusiasm took me by the arm and without hesitation rushed me out across the lawn to where the others stood, and asked me to repeat what I had said to him.

They, of course, showed keen interest, especially M. Clemenceau, as I told them what I had said to Gen. Foch. Col. Boyd, my aide, was kind enough to say that, under the inspiration of the moment, my French was spoken with a fluency that I could not have mustered 10 minutes before or after.

It appeared in the French papers the next morning, although I feel certain that it was written up in much better French than I actually used:

Engineers in Battle

The English translation follows:

"I have come to tell you that the American people would consider it a great honor for our troops to be engaged in the present battle; I ask you for this in their name and my own.

"At this moment there are no other questions but of fighting.

"Infantry, artillery, aviation, all that we have are yours; use them as you wish. More will come, in numbers equal to requirements.

"I have come especially to tell you that the American people will be proud to take part in the greatest battle of history."

If the responsibility had been mine I should not have hesitated a moment to put into the battle any or all of our five divisions then in France. The 1st was the only one used for the time being, the others being placed in quiet sectors, each to relieve two French divisions. As our divisions were more than twice as large as theirs it amounted to almost immediate reinforcement of 10 divisions.

At the time of the German attack a battalion of the American 6th Regiment of Engineers was on duty behind the British Fifth Army, engaged in railway construction and repairs. These troops were given arms and participated with the British forces in the defensive operations until after the lines were stabilized.

In carrying out our plans for the organization of an American army on the Lorraine front, with the reduction of the St. Mihiel salient planned as the initial operation, the volume of construction necessary along our line of communications had been pushed as fast as conditions permitted. The establishment of advance depots and other installations in Lorraine were well under way.

Hopes Shattered

On January 16 the 1st Division (Bullard) had entered the line north of Toul, with the understanding that other divisions would follow as they became sufficiently trained, and that when four divisions were available an American Army corps would be formed and the sector would pass definitely under American control. The 26th Division (Edwards) had been withdrawn from the Chemin des Dames March 21, and the 42nd Division (Menoher) from east of Luneville two days later, and both were prepared to take their places beside the 1st.

Gen. Bullard

These were to be followed by the 2nd Division (Bundy) then in line for preliminary experience at Sommedieue, south of Verdun, while the 32nd Division (Haan), which had only recently arrived, would come in later.

The headquarters of the I Corps (Liggett), which had been organized at Neufchateau in January, was to move up to Toul as soon as there were three divisions in the line. It could be said that the most important step in organizing an American army would then be taken. But just as our hopes were about to be realized the storm broke, the situation on the British front created a grave crisis, and the concentration of our troops in an American sector, much to my regret, was voluntarily and indefinitely postponed.

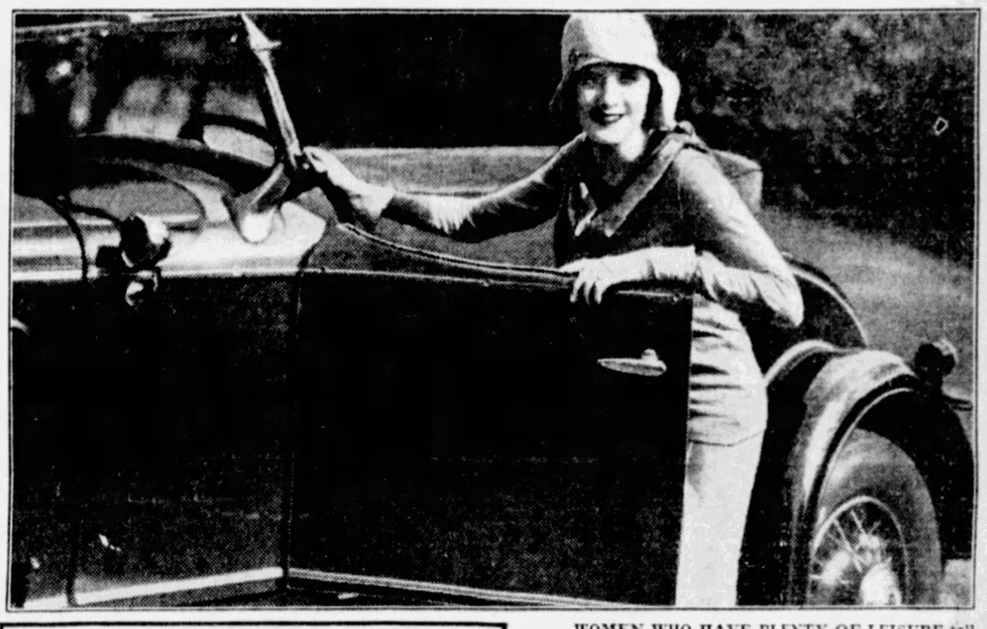
Women Now Find Easier Lives

AN INQUISITIVE REPORTER FINDS OUT HOW

By Mary Lee Work

MISS FLORENCE C. STEWART, 215 Sanders Rd., Buffalo, N. Y. "Around our house whenever any new cleaning problem comes up, we always say first, 'Try Climalene.' And usually we never have to try anything else. For Climalene not only does all the ordinary jobs better and quicker, like washing dishes and clothes. It also does other amazing things like taking out ink stains from rugs, polishing silver without rubbing, and loosening lime scale in the teakettle. Why, Climalene will just save hours of any housewife's time!"



WOMEN WHO HAVE PLENTY OF LEISURE tell us that their secret is a system that saves time and drudgery in little things. Try some of the clever ways we found them using in typical homes just like yours. You'll save hours each day.

More Time To Play!

Now come new discoveries that are giving women what they have always wanted. Freedom from household drudgery. Easier work, more time for the movies, for shopping, for the Joy of Life. Want to know how it's done?

Read them as they were told to our reporter. Then try them yourself.

Jobs like washing dishes and polishing silver take only half the time or less. You'll never have greasy scum on dishes. Never glassware that doesn't sparkle like jewels. Never a streaked, gray, or faded wash.

All you need is a 10-cent package of a preparation called Climalene. You'll be amazed to see how easy it makes countless jobs that once were irksome drudgery. You'll understand why women used over 33,000,000 packages last year.

Your hands, too, are helped by Climalene. It keeps them as soft and lovely as a cosmetic. For it contains the same elements as costly bath salts.

Try Climalene today. Your grocer has it in two sizes, 10c to 25c. You'll be glad you discovered it.

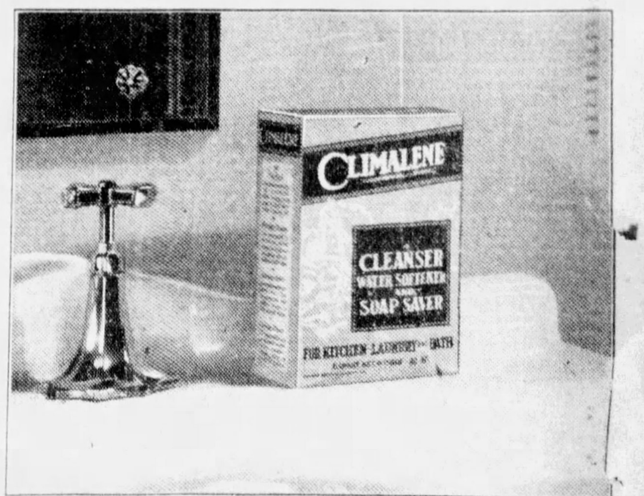
THE CLIMALENE COMPANY
Canton, Ohio, and Chicago, Illinois

MRS. PETROLINIA DEUTSCH, of 43 East Division Street, Chicago, TELLS HOW CLIMALENE SAVES DELICATE LINGERIE AND GLOVES. "I recently heard a radio talk about the uses of Climalene so I bought a package and was amazed with its magical powers. Washing lingerie, silk hosiery and gloves so that they won't fade or streak was always a problem. But with Climalene, it is nothing at all. I soak the various items separately in water to which a teaspoon of Climalene has been added and a few hours later I whisk them around, rinse, and the job is done. My washable leather gloves come out soft and pliable when washed with Climalene in the water. There's nothing like it!"

MRS. J. H. BROOKS, 2475 W. Walnut St., Milwaukee, Wis. "I believe that I save at least an hour or two every day by using Climalene. In the first place it cuts my dishwashing-time in half. I also use it in the bathroom not only to clean the fixtures and porcelain but I also find that a tablespoonful in the bath water makes it soft as rain and eliminates bath tub 'ring.' In the laundry I find that Climalene saves soap and eliminates streaking and fading as well as grayness."

MRS. FREDERICK SLOAN, 56 East Walton Place, Chicago. "Before using Climalene, I was never quite satisfied with the way my china and glassware looked. One teaspoon of Climalene in the dishwater now makes everything sparkle and gleam in half the time. It used to take half a day of rubbing with paste polish to clean silver. Now we simply add a teaspoon of Climalene to an aluminum pan of boiling water—put in the silver and boil it for two minutes and rinse, and the job is over."

MRS. JOHN A. MURPHY, Southeast 14th and Heckman, Des Moines, Ia. "I use Climalene for every cleaning purpose. Because it does a better job and saves half my time. With it, dishes and glassware sparkle and gleam like new. I even use a teaspoonful of Climalene in a basin of water to clean combs and brushes. Just let them stand for a couple of minutes and then rinse."



Climalene is both a cleanser and water softener. All dirt, according to scientific research, is largely grease. Soap contains certain elements that loosen grease, and that's how soap cleans. Naptha also dissolves grease. Climalene is unique in that it gives water the power to dissolve grease. At the same time it makes Hard water, harsh water or Lake water soft as rain. Use it without soap. Or use only the usual amount of soap. You'll find it makes any cleaning job when water is used far easier and quicker. Also, it keeps hands soft and lovely as a cosmetic. For it contains certain of the same elements used in costly bath salts.

NEW BALL AFFECTS OLD LOOP CHIEFLY

MOST BASEBALL MEN are of the opinion that the change to be made in the ball for the coming season will add more effectiveness to the pitching in the National League than in the American. In other words, they think the batting averages in the Heydler circuit are due to take a bigger drop than those in the Barnard loop. The belief is based on the fact that the heavier stitching in the new ball is calculated to give the pitchers a better grip on the pull and thus make it easier to curve. Naturally, this will aid particularly the hurlers who specialize in hooks.

Bill McKechnie

As the National League is one in which curve-ball pitching predominates, whereas the American League leans to fast-ball hurling, it is figured that the flingers in the senior organization naturally will be benefited to a greater extent than their slab brethren in the other major body. The difference between the pitching styles of the two big leagues never was so pronounced as at present, in the opinion of Bill McKechnie, manager of the Boston Braves, who is preparing to leave his Wilkinsburg home for training camp next Monday.

"THE CURVE BALL rules the National League roost today," said McKechnie. "It is no exaggeration to say that 98 per cent of the batters in our league are fast-ball hitters, and they are quite willing merely to look at two curve balls and let them pass if they can get the catcher to call for a fast ball immediately afterward.

"Remember Red Smith, the old Boston third baseman? He was a pretty fair hitter, never under the .300 mark, and I recall an admission he made that he was perfectly satisfied if he saw one good fast ball each time he went to the plate. He figured his batting percentage was in his ability to hit that one good fast ball. Smith used to say that he hit .300 on fast balls, that 90 per cent of his safe hits were made against that kind of pitching.

"THE SAME PERCENTAGE usually holds good in our league. I have a feeling that the American League is much more friendly toward fast-ball pitching as a defensive system than the National. That has been my observation down South. It seems to mean that the American has better fast-ball pitchers. I'm inclined to believe that this is the case.

"Of course if you have a pitcher who has such a good fast ball that it is practically unhittable, then you're foolish not to use him. But I think that the strength of the general run of National League pitchers is curve-ball pitching, and when a pitcher starts throwing anything but his best ball he's courting trouble. A fault with some catchers in the National League is that they call for too many fast balls in pinches when they ought to call for curves."

MEMORIES OF THE thrilling final inning of the deciding world series game of 1925 at Forbes Field, in which the Pirates won the title by defeating the Senators, 9 to 7, are brought to Pittsburgh fans by the announcement that Southpaw Rube Oldham, last year with Atlanta, probably will retire from baseball to devote his entire time to a filling station which he recently purchased in Los Angeles. Called in to pitch that last inning, with Johnny Gooch, now visiting in Pittsburgh, as his battery mate, Oldham covered himself with glory and brought the series to a sensational close by fanning Sam Rice, retiring Bucky Harris on a line fly to Eddie Moore at second base, and whiffing Goose Goslin for the third out.

Sonny Workman

THE ACCIDENT AT Hialeah Park in Miami last week in which Raymond (Sonny) Workman suffered a fractured leg may prevent that famous jockey from realizing the turf ambition of his life. Workman has long dreamed of winning the Kentucky Derby, and a great chance loomed for him this year, as he was scheduled to ride the mighty Equipoise.

Whether he will be back in riding trim by that time, however, is questionable. Workman himself is confident that he will be able to pilot Equipoise in the Derby on May 16, and that he will also be found riding the same horse in the Preakness the preceding week. But many veteran horsemen doubt it.

IT IS RECALLED that four years ago a broken leg kept Earl Sande out of commission for many months. He was hurt in August and it was not until the following March that he was able to start riding a saddle horse at exercise. Possibly the complete recovery of Workman may be as long delayed.

The chance that Workman may not be able to ride has not shaken the confidence of Equipoise's owner and followers in the Derby prospects of that horse. They think he can't miss and he will be so strongly backed that he probably will go the post the favorite.

WRITING FROM CHICAGO, Red Mason recalls that Stanley Ketchel appeared in a Pittsburgh ring once before his bout with Frank Klaus. "I went after Ketchel the first time and brought him to Pittsburgh to meet Hugh McGann, or Hubert McGuinness, the latter being his proper name, at Duquesne Garden," he writes. "Jimmy Dime and the others in McGann's corner used a tank of oxygen on McGann between rounds. I had previously put McGann on against Billy Berger one night in an extra bout after some of the events had been cut short by quick knockouts. I had bought Charley Porter's share of the club at that time and Roy Schooley asked me to go East and get Ketchel. When Ketchel was matched to meet Klaus later I went to Hot Springs and brought him with me to Pittsburgh.

"IT SURELY WOULD have been a great pleasure to me if I had been down at Moose Temple the other night to see all that crowd of old timers that appeared at Father Cox's benefit show," Mason adds. "At one time or another I looked after nearly all of the old boys who were there.

"It has been more than four years since poor Harry Greb died, and I have done very little in a financial way with the boxers I have had in the meantime. I have not had time to develop any one like Johnny Ray, Cuddy DeMarco or others I had in the past."

THE PROPOSED TRADE of Willie Kamm by the White Sox to Cleveland for Lew Fonseca is still on, despite a reported statement by Charles A. Comiskey, Sox owner, a few days ago that it had been dropped.

Manager Donie Bush expresses the opinion that Comiskey was misquoted. Donie declares the deal is still pending and may go through at any time if he can induce the Indian management to throw in another player with Fonseca, whom he wants for the vacant post at first base.

Herb Pennock

HERB PENNOCK will be 37 a week from today, and may be slipping after 19 seasons in the major leagues, but he insists that he's still worth a whole lot more than the Yankee owners have offered him for the 1931 season and says he won't sign until he gets it. Two conferences with the Yankee officials have failed to budge him. Pennock, who is one of the few players in a position to give up baseball, says he is determined to quit rather than submit to much of a cut in salary. Herb is one of six Yankee players still holding out. The others are First Baseman Lou Gehrig, Shortstop Lyn Lary, Pitchers Lou McEvoy and Frank Barnes, and Outfielder Fred Walker.

PAUL WANER EXPECTED TO SIGN SOON

By CHARLES J. DOYLE.

With the Pirate advance squad slated to leave for camp in a week, it was reported reliably today that the club's only serious holdout threat reposed in Lawrence (Larry) French, aggressive left-hand pitcher, who has been with the Buccos for two seasons.

There are well-defined rumors also to the effect that Paul Waner is not signed, but negotiations are believed to be going on between Paul and his employers which are expected to iron out comparatively small financial difficulties. The hard-hitting rightfielder is the highest-salaried player on the team.

REAL BUSINESS MAN

French has been a dissenter in the two years he has been with the club. A real business gent is Laughing Larry when it comes to money matters. It was hinted that French might be holding out for a star's envelope. He won 17 and lost 18 games last season, but he says he can win more consistently. That the argument between Larry and his bosses represents a tidy sum is denoted from his general viewpoint on salary matters.

The most obscure rookie in a major league training camp has been known to steal the spotlight of attention. Perhaps the Paso Robles roundup of the Pirates will bring into focus such an athlete in a person of a gangling youth of Jackson, Miss.

Jim Bivin, a raw-boned lad with a height of more than 6 feet, was pitching for the Davenport club of the Mississippi Valley League last August when Max Carey of the Pirates went into that section to watch him perform. It didn't take Scoops long to put the stamp of approval on the lanky right-hander.

BIVIN STAR

Carey also studied the actions of Lloyd Vernon Kennedy, of the Burlington club, of the same circuit. Max liked this kid right-hander and both rookies were landed by the Pirates.

In his first season of professional ball, Bivin came through like a star, the youth won 12 and lost nine games. In view of his scant experience, Manager Ens holds little hope for the lad to come through this year, yet Ens has heard enough about Bivin to convince him that he should get a lot of attention in the preparatory period. In the event that James shows promise he is likely to be placed with a club of higher classification. The league which graduated him is of Class D designation, same being the lowest of the baseball circuits. The new pitcher is aged 20.

Dryden, First Baseball Wit, Is Dead

CHICAGO, Feb. 12.—(AP)—Charles Dryden, first and perhaps the greatest of all baseball humorists, is dead.

The man who originated nearly all the expressions used in writing baseball today passed on yesterday in his modest little cottage in Ocean Springs, Miss., after being a hopeless paralytic for 10 years. He was about 71 years old.

Dryden, who worked on Chicago, San Francisco, and New York papers, up until about 15 years ago, became famous for the unique manner in which he reported baseball games. He always built his stories around an incident which struck him as humorous. He was nationally recognized as one who could pick a nickname for a baseball player and make it stick and make the baseball player like it. He was the first to call Frank Chance, late manager of the famous Cub team of 1906, the Peerless Leader.

Pitcher Pipgras' Appendix Removed

HOT SPRINGS, Ark., Feb. 12.—(INS)—Doctors reported today that the condition of George Pipgras, New York Yankee pitcher, was favorable following an emergency operation for appendicitis performed late yesterday.

Although his was described as an acute case of appendicitis, Pipgras rested easily last night, physicians said.

Wickhorst, Allison To Assist Ingram

BERKELEY, Cal., Feb. 12.—(INS)—Frank Wickhorst, former line coach at Iowa, and Leonard B. Allison, former assistant coach at the University of Wisconsin, have been selected to aid William A. Ingram in coaching the University of California football team next season, it was announced today.

TOMORROW: THE PRIVATE WHO REFUSED TO BE A GENERAL.

M.-A. CONFAB HERE SUNDAY

A special meeting of the Middle Atlantic League has been called here for Sunday to take action that may result in the formation of a 12-club circuit.

Notice of the meeting was sent to those concerned by Elmer Dailey, president of the Mid-Atlantic, yesterday. The gathering is to be held in the Hotel Henry.

In his call, Dailey urged all clubs to send to the meeting representatives authorized to act in their behalf, so that there may be no further delay in considering the applications of four cities for permission to enter teams in the league—Charleston, Huntington and Beckley in West Virginia and Hagerstown in Maryland.

Charleston, Huntington and Beckley are principal members of the Tri-State League. Hagerstown was associated with the Blue Ridge loop.

Read on what Geyer himself has to say about the incident, in a letter from Steubenville, O., where he now resides:

"The statement of Dorgan is very embarrassing to me, as I still am in the boxing game, and I would like to have you give my side of the story. Dorgan says Moran fired me because I was a punk sparring partner. I had beaten Moran in 'Frisco and fought Morris three times, losing to him in New York, drawing with him in Denver and beating him in Dallas, Tex. . . . I went to Tulsa with the idea of meeting the winner of the Moran-Morris bout. Moran wanted me to train with him for $75 a week and I did this for two weeks, and, when he prepared to leave town after the fight was called off, I had papers served on him to get my money. . . . In 1919, I fought Moran again, in Pittsburgh, after having been out of the ring for three years, and naturally lost. . . . He is heartily ashamed of the exhibition, but says it was the best he could do under the circumstances and vows he is off southpaws for life. . . . "I'm in favor of exterminating all of them except, of course, myself," he said yesterday. . . . He further explained his poor showing against LaRose by saying he had overtrained, drilling hard for more than a week, boxing six rounds daily, going on the road and also doing gym calisthenics to fit himself for a corking fight in the semi-final spot. . . . He trained with Jackie Rodgers at Republic.

NET TOURNEY BODY SET

By PAUL G. SULLIVAN

Reverberation of the Pittsburgh Tennis Association winter meeting at the P. A. A., Monday evening was heard yesterday as Frank S. Smith, Edgewood leader, and newly-appointed general chairman of the forty-third annual Western Pennsylvania net championships, sat in special session with P. T. A. officials and started the apple rolling toward initiation of preliminary work on the district court classic, slated to get under way on the Stanton Heights Golf Club rectangles on Saturday, June 20.

As a result of the noonday conclave, announcement was made that the following group will serve as members of the tourney executive committee, with full authority to care for all details in connection with the West Penn affair: Frank S. Smith, Edgewood, chairman; John D. Beatty, Stanton Heights; J. Phillips Davis, University Club; V. K. Glidden, Stanton Heights; W. McCook Reed, Pittsburgh Golf Club; Edward D. Seitz, Alpha Kappa Psi, and Paul G. Sullivan, Pittsburgh Athletic Association.

Duties bearing on the 1931 event will be divided among various subcommittees, these to be chosen before the end of the current month. Particular effort will be directed toward the entertainment of out-of-town guests during the local contesting. Already several volunteers have come forward with offers to house one or more visitors to the tussles and it is hoped that it will be possible to arrange for low rates at one or more of the numerous hostelries within reasonable distance of the Stanton lot.

SOCCER TILT CARDED

One soccer game will be played in the Panhandle League on Sunday, Shannon Flintex meeting Boxer Hill on the latters' grounds. Brannigan will be the official in charge.

If this American University basketball team slated to oppose Carnegie's Tartan warriors in the Tech gym tonight isn't any better than the outfit that Catholic U. sprang on the boys at Duquesne last night, the evening will be just a breeze for the Tartans and worse than that for the spectators.

The Skibos, fresh from their decisive thumping of Wash-Jeff, should experience little difficulty in lowering the colors of the Washington visitors. Of course, one can never tell, and the affair may wind up with the Skibos finding themselves in quite a ball game.

Coach Buzz Hogan, who is still very much tickled with the way two of his reserve players, Seigal and Armentrout, came through against Wash-Jeff, will start the usual lineup against the Washington Methodists. Bob Smith and Cappy Nease will go at the forwards; Eddie Stentz will be in there at center and Jim Leonard and Red Fergus at the guards.

In a Walk

The only way folks who saw this Catholic University club play last night can figure that it beat the Dukes in Washington is that it won that game by mail.

Last night's affair was a cinch from the word go for the Dukes. An uncanny barrage of field goals, that rained from all parts and from all angles, blew to pieces a very, very vapid Catholic U. defense and brought about a 57-18 triumph for Duquesne.

At the half the count was 22 to 7, in favor of the locals, and with half of the second period gone bye-bye, the Daviesmen were out in front by 40 to 10. From then on, with second and third string players cavorting about the floor, the Dukes rolled up 17 more points while the opposition, which early in the evening had decided that today would be a swell day for a new start in life, compiled the useless total of eight.

Snub Irwin, in as a sub, accounted for six field goals in the second half to lead his team in its scoring orgy. Smoke Abele tossed four buckets, Benedict 2, McGeever 3, Stephens 4, Wilder 3 and Parry and Pawlina one each.

The only man on the visiting club that looked like a ball player was Sheary, a guard, who flung himself three baskets and three out of four fouls for half his team's points. The lineup:

Dukes (57)		Catholic U. (18)
Abele	F	Cunningham
Benedict	F	Spinelli
McGeever	C	Flynn
Stephens	G	Sheary
Parry	G	Oliver

Score by periods:

Dukes		22-35—57
Catholic U.		7-11—18

Substitutions: Dukes—Pawlina, Irwin.

JACKET SEXTET BATTLES LONDON TONIGHT

Bethany, West Virginia, Westminster Passers Score Floor Victories

LOCALS INVADE TECUMSEHS' HOME ICE

By CARL W. SHATTO.

The Yellow Jackets, who became quite friendly with Old Man Opportunity by twice heeding his knock this week, will be out to accord the venerable ancient another warm welcome when they meet the Tecumsehs in an International League hockey game at London tonight.

For the local puckmen this week is just one important series after another. At the start of the week the Jackets were trailing Cleveland and London, deadlocked for third and fourth places in the league standings, by a margin of two and one-half games. The Jackets whittled a full game from the Indians' lead by "taking" the defending champions for a victory and a tie in two fights.

Pittsburgh's success against Cleveland enabled London to pull away from the Indians and the Tecumsehs now are undisputed holders of third place, two and one-half games away from the Schooley skaters.

PLAY HERE NEXT

As was the case with Cleveland, the Pittsburgh-London series is to be of two games. At the finish of the game in London tonight, the Jackets and Tecumsehs will advance on Duquesne Garden, where they are to resume their warfare Saturday night.

Cleveland has played one more game than has Pittsburgh and the Indians are not to return to action until Saturday. In the event that the Jackets sweep the two-game series with the Tecumsehs, therefore, the dawn of another week will find the locals no more than a half-game out of third place.

Although the Jackets' morale is high, as a result of downing the hitherto unbeatable Indians their last time out, the Schooley icemen are likely to run into plenty of trouble in London. The Tecumsehs have downed the Buffalo Bisons, 3-0, and the Windsor Bulldogs, 3-0, in their last two starts. This is a very noteworthy feat, and it indicates that the Londoners are functioning at the top of their form.

LONDON HAS EDGE

In four previous meetings between tonight's rivals, London bagged three decisions and Pittsburgh one. In no previous meeting, however, have the stakes been as high as they will be in the frays tonight and Saturday, and at no time have the Jackets been performing more smoothly and effectively than they are today. The jousts loom as "toss-ups," with the breaks likely to decide the issue.

Roy D. Schooley, president and manager of the local club, is overlooking no bets in keeping his men in the best of condition. Departing from a customary procedure, he started 'em for London at noon yesterday, in order that they might get their night's rest in a hotel rather than a sleeper. Heretofore the locals have left Pittsburgh in the evening when a game in Canada was on the next day's slate.

Art Berlett, out for the last 10 days with an attack of flu, did not accompany his mates to London, but Goalie Albie Cox, handicaped by a bad cold in the Cleveland game Tuesday, was able to make the trip. Albie's condition was somewhat improved yesterday, assuring his appearance in the nets.

THIRD PLACE AT STAKE

NEW YORK, Feb. 12.—(AP.)—Third place in the American Division of the National Hockey League is at stake tonight again as the New York Rangers and Detroit Falcons clash for the fifth time this season. Ottawa's Senators, last in the Canadian division, and still losing, entertain the speedy Chicago Blackhawks.

State Commission Suspends Floyd

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 12.—(AP.)—Frank Floyd, referee of the recent Tommy Loughran-Jack Gross bout here, was suspended indefinitely by the Pennsylvania State Athletic Commission yesterday for "carelessness in returning his decision." Other suspensions included:

George Weiman, referee, Girardville, Pa., two months, for failure to interpret the rules of the commission correctly.

BELMONT BACK IN WINDUPS

By HARRY KECK,
Sports Editor.

Jimmy Belmont, who under the management of Frank Klaus, former middleweight champion, has won his last four bouts by the knockout route, is back on top in his quest for fistic fame. He has risen once from the ranks of the preliminary boxers to the estate of a main-bouter and will make his next appearance in the windup of Jim McGirr's show in McKeesport one week from tonight. Joe Trippe, of Rochester, N. Y., a favorite with the fans of this district, and especially in the Tube City, where he has had his best success, will be his opponent.

Jimmy Belmont

If Belmont can continue his kayo streak at the expense of the experienced Trippe, he will have accomplished something with the new fighting style which Klaus forced him to adopt when he took him over. The battle with Trippe will be at 148 pounds.

ROSE DUE TODAY

Billy Rose, of Cincinnati, is due in town today for his 10-round main bout at the Moose Temple tomorrow night with Billy Holt, Negro, of Homewood. Indications are that the pair will pull quite a house, for Rose sold himself to the fans of the downtown arena a few weeks ago, when he handily took the measure of the popular Jimmy Kelly, of the North Side, after previously having beaten Benny McArthur in McKeesport on top of a good fight with Tom Malco in the latter arena. Holt recently gave Joe Trippe a hectic session at Motor Square Garden, and is a hard-hitting, promising youngster.

Between Rounds

Billy Wallace boxes Mickey Diamond, Al Trainor spots Harry (Kid) Ross, and Emory Cahana mixes with Ritchie Martell in bouts in Philadelphia tonight. Jimmy Slavin boxes Chico Gonzales in New York and Joe Glick takes on Johnny LaMar at Sacramento, Cal.

Jack Dempsey will referee an Eddie Shea-Soldier Dombrooski bout at Youngstown tonight. Tomorrow night he officiates in Erie, and on Saturday he appears in Lorain, O.

Locals Fail to Show Interest in Hazleton

HAZLETON, Pa., Feb. 12.—(AP.)—Although yesterday was set as the time when several Pittsburgh men announced that they would come to Hazleton to negotiate with President Paul Ferry, of the New York-Pennsylvania League team, to take over the club for 1931, the local promoters announced late last night that nothing had been heard from the men who spent last Sunday here when preliminary details were gone over. Indications point to the present owners retaining the franchise for 1931 and games again will be staged at the Buhler Stadium.

PASSERS FACE BIG SCHEDULE TONIGHT

By JULIUS LEVIN

Three stellar basketball games, two of them league affairs, grace tonight's basketball and, judging from the interest shown by the fans, all three should draw large crowds.

The two important league battles bring together old antagonists, and indications are that two hard-fought games will be furnished the followers of the contestants. The J. J. Mieles renew an old feud with the Fintex team at Columbus Temple in an Allegheny County League contest, while at North Side Moose Hall, Community House and the Ray Schneiders, sectional rivals, clash in a West Penn League fray.

The big independent clash is that between the Y. M. H. A. and the Cleveland Pennzoil Club. The Ohioans are one of the few clubs to defeat the Y. M. H. A. this season, and the local quintet is out for revenge. The Bellefielders have avenged every defeat suffered so far this season by trimming their vanquishers in return contests, and they feel certain they will even the score with the Forest City passers tonight.

Duquesne plays at Monongahela in the Tri-County League. Downtown Y is at Tarentum in the County Amateur League. Mt. Troy is the attraction at Faith Chapel in the Senior Church League. B. & O. goes to the Catholic Foresters and Pittsburghers to Manchester Community in the Greater Pittsburgh League. Sewickley appears at Homewood in the Wagner Institutional League. St. Joseph's plays at St. James' in the Catholic Lyceum League. First Presbyterian is at Pittsburgh-Central and Mt. Troy at Faith Chapel in the Junior Church League.

The Y. M. H. A. Varsity B quintet meets Swissvale Lyceum tonight in the preliminary to the Y. M. H. A.-Pennzoil game.

Monessen K. of K. strengthened its lead in the Wagner Tri-County League last night by tripping Wellsburg, 25-23. St. Casmir's defeated St. James', 47-17, in the Lyceum loop, while Rankin beat Kingsley, 36-33, in the Amateur League.

St. Michael's won over Brideson-Lace, 50-45, and the Hoyles toppled the Bailey Big Five, 40-34, in the A. A. U. tourney.

The Cayton copped from the Cleaners, 29-25, and Question beat North Avenue M. E., 35-34, in the Schneider League, while the Marshalls copped from Phi Omega Theta, 28-5, and the Chesters won over the Swans, 17-4, in the Y. M. H. A. Intra-Mural League.

DOCTOR GREGG EXTENDED TO WIN

PINEHURST, N. C., Feb. 12.—John R. Bowker, of Detroit, had Dr. G. T. Gregg, national senior champion, 3 down at the fourth hole in the eleventh annual seniors tournament here yesterday. They were all even at the turn, but Gregg won by 4 and 3, setting his opponent two stymies on the inward nine.

C. B. Hollingsworth dropped his match to N. B. Hersloff, of New York, by 2 and 1, while J. M. Jamison, of Greensburg, lost his match to his brother, T. S. Jamison, by default.

In the third division, C. S. Marshall, of Pittsburgh, lost his match to T. H. Hall, of Toronto, 3 and 2, while in the fourth Lawrence Barr, of Pittsburgh, defeated Julius Matthews, of Boston, by 4 and 3.

FLOOR LEAGUE FORMED

READING, Pa., Feb. 12.—(AP.)—An eastern Pennsylvania Collegiate Basketball League, with seven members, was organized here last night. In the conference are Albright, Lebanon Valley, Franklin and Marshall, Gettysburg, Drexel, Muhlenberg and Ursinus. F. E. Miller, of Lebanon Valley, was elected president. The league will open its season in 1932.

RELATIONS RENEWED

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Feb. 12.—(AP.)—For the first time since 1926, Harvard and Princeton will meet each other in a dual sports event. A home-and-home agreement was concluded yesterday, the two mighty Ivies deciding, one to be played at Cambridge on April 4 and the other at Princeton on May 9.

NAVY, GROVERS AND JACKETS BEATEN

WAYNESBURG, Pa., Feb. 12.—Bethany College continued their sweep toward the tri-state title and scored their ninth consecutive triumph of the season by defeating Waynesburg College, 54 to 27, in a tri-state conference clash here last night. The lineup:

Bethany—54		Waynesburg—27
Bush	F	Avery
Lacey	F	Currie
Tetley	C	Jones
Kinsell	G	Matson
Bennett	G	Lucas

Score by periods:

Bethany	26	28		54
Waynesburg	12	15		27

Field goals—Bethany, Bush 7, Lacey, Tetley 2, Kinsell 3, Bennett 2, Jones 2, Currie 2, Matson 2, Lucas 2. Fouls—Bethany, Bush 2 out of 4, Lacey 1 out of 2, Tetley 1 out of 2, Kinsell 2 out of 4, Bennett 1 out of 2, Jones 2 out of 4, Currie 1 out of 2, Matson 1 out of 2, Lucas 2 out of 4. Referee—Bowman, Waynesburg. Umpire—Black, Waynesburg.

MOUNTAINEERS WIN

ANNAPOLIS, Feb. 12. West Virginia returned to its usual basketball form when it defeated the Navy, 41-36, here last night. It was the fourth game on West Virginia's eastern trip, and the players were forced to exert every ounce of energy in order to ring up this triumph. The lineup:

West Virginia—41		Navy—36
Hagan	F	Hall
Lough	F	Kasten
Barring	C	Bedell
Hasley	G	Buchanan
Schaffner, Capt.	G	Hollenbeck, Burg

Substitutions—West Virginia, Gerringer, Werner for Lough, Daniel for Hasley. Navy, Burg for Hollenbeck. Field goals—Hagan 3, Barring, Hasley, Werner, Gerringer, Daniel 2, Hall 2, Kasten 2, Bedell 2, Buchanan 2, Burg. Fouls—West Virginia, Hagan 2 out of 3, Lough 2 out of 3, Barring 1 out of 2, Hasley 1 out of 2, Schaffner 1 out of 2, Gerringer 1 out of 2, Daniel 1 out of 2. Navy, Hall 1 out of 2, Kasten 1 out of 2, Bedell 1 out of 2, Buchanan 1 out of 2, Burg 1 out of 2. Referee—Bowman, Waynesburg. Umpire—Black, Waynesburg.

WESTMINSTER COPS

NEW WILMINGTON, Pa., Feb. 12.—A garrison finish by Westminster College enabled the Titans to annex a 29-to-25 victory over the Grove City passers in one of the most spectacular floor tilts of the season here last night. The lineup:

Westminster—29		Grove City—25
Cunningham	F	Fegley
Gallagher	F	Mankey
Brownlee	C	Burns
Rice	G	Laycock
Fisher	G	Reeves

KAYOS MARK TOURNEY

DOZEN GOLDEN GLOVE BOUTS END EARLY

Ten technical knockouts and two clean kayos featured the opening of the two-day Golden Glove amateur tournament last night at the Palisades rink in McKeesport. Twenty-six bouts in six classes were staged and nearly all of them were fast, action producers.

The semi-final and final rounds in all classes will be run off tonight in the same rink and more than 30 bouts are carded. Dutch Weir, McKeesport A. C. heavyweight, scored the cleanest knockout of last night's show when he flattened John Blasko of the West Newton A. C. after one minute and 52 seconds of fighting in the first round. Blasko was out for several minutes after hitting the canvas. Red Vissat of the West Newton A. C. also registered a clean kayo win, A. Michaels, of the McKeesport A. C. being the victim. The sudden ending came in the second round when Vissat crossed a hard right to Michaels' chin during a wild mix-up.

Gene Sala, West Newton A. C., took a decision over Anson Greeves of the Duquesne A. C. in the only extra round bout of the evening. Bill Simendinger, of Pittsburgh, referee all of the bouts, and the judges were Phil Scello and Jack Kelly. The summary:

112-pound class—James Dragich, Hughes A. C., defeated Steve Fedorko, Boys' Club; technical knockout, second round. 126-pound class—Bill Kuhn, West Newton A. C., defeated Mickey Bellotti, C. Leonard Club; referee's decision. Sal Bucaro, Mc Keesport A. C., defeated Ernest Yetz, unattached; referee's decision. Steadman, Braddock A. C., defeated Mike Tarpeni, Mills A. C.; referee's decision. Edward Lang, Schenley Athletic Club, defeated Sandy Adams, A. C. M. Dodge; referee's decision. Frankie Keesport A. C., defeated Frankie Coons, Edgewater A. Westminster Sports Council Reorganized

NEW WILMINGTON, Pa., Feb. 12.—The athletic council of Westminster College, composed of representatives of the board of trustees, the alumni, the faculty of the college and the students, held a reorganization meeting here at which Attorney James A. Stranahan, Mercer, was elected president.

Other officers elected were: James A. Pitzer, New Wilmington, vice president; Graduate Manager A. A. McDonald, New Wilmington, secretary, and Howell T. Getty, New Wilmington, treasurer.

West Bethlehem High Coach Quits

WASHINGTON, Pa., Feb. 12.—George W. Adams, principal and athletic coach at West Bethlehem High School, Marianna, has presented his resignation to the board to be effective at the conclusion of the present school term. Adams has had unusual success at West Bethlehem, producing winning teams despite a small student body and a lack of facilities. He is a graduate of Washington and Jefferson College.

Pa., and did not know until a few days before entering the ring that LaRose was a southpaw, or he could have worked out with sparring partners boxing in sidewheel fashion.

"I knew what I wanted to do, but just simply couldn't do it," Marcus said. "I was all keyed up and never felt worse in my life than when the crowd got on us and I was unable to help myself. . . . Generally I can shift about if my southpaw style doesn't work, but against La Rose I couldn't even do this. . . If anybody ever matches me with another southpaw I hope one of us is suspended for life." . . . Building Up Big Fights

By IKE DORGAN,
The Man Behind Tex Rickard's Fistic Ballyhoos.

CHAPTER XXVIII.

This time Tex Rickard played a daring hand with his money in the Argentine. The war was on, and, knowing Frank Flournoy, later to be his undercover partner in the promoting of the Willard and Dempsey fight at Toledo, the pair pooled their bankrolls and bought over a gigantic cold storage plant near Buenos Aires. A German concern had owned it and ran into difficulties, so they were perfectly willing to sell to the two Americans.

Tex Rickard

It was Rickard's idea that he and Flournoy could corner every steer in South America and supply the armies of the world with beef and leather for the duration of the war.

Great fortunes for both if they only could hit. They had little or no competition ahead of them, but the greatest of all bugaboos during the war—transportation—confronted and finally sank them.

They fought it out to the end of their bankrolls. Shoestrings they had when they started home.

TEX BROKE, RETURNS

"We'll have to win our way," Tex told Flournoy. "I'll take to the bridge tables, Frank, and you hit the poker layouts, and play 'em close to your chest."

The odd part about it was that Flournoy, who couldn't play cards at all, kept the bankrolls going. Tex, an expert at bridge, kept losing more and more at each sitting.

Tex had one thought in mind. Probably because the packing and cold storage plant had gone bloom, he figured the war would do the same. He went around the boat offering to bet $20,000 to $10,000 that peace would be declared by the time the boat tied up at her dock in New York. He didn't have two bucks to his name. He didn't find anyone willing to bet that the war would keep roaring on and he thanked his lucky stars as he and Flournoy came down the gangplank with war scareheads fairly booming from the front pages of the first New York papers to meet their gaze. How little he dreamed that the war still would be going on in its cruel stride even up to the day Dempsey knocked out Willard.

RAISING A BANKROLL

On the way up Tex came back to his old love—the talk of another world heavyweight championship battle. After all, it was sure fire with him where the Argentine had been such a bloomer.

Tex had lost all track of the march of the heavyweights. For one thing, he didn't have to look in the Army roster for any of them, those that counted for anything. Tunney, unknown then, was with the Marines in France.

Willard was traveling with the 101 Ranch outfit. He had told Col. Miller, owner of the Wild West show, to go out and make a match with Fred Fulton for him and he would pay all expenses.

On the way up on the boat, Rickard asked Flournoy if he could dig up any money when they arrived. Frank thought he could. Tex thought he could himself. He was thinking of Charley Sabin, the banker at the time. Sabin liked Tex and would go for a loan any old time where Rickard was concerned. Sabin is a great fight bug and he liked Rickard's style in putting over a big show.

JESS SEEKS BATTLE

So the pair of them weren't worrying much. The present standing of the big fellows was the only thing that concerned them. Like Corse Payton, the actor, they figured that money is the cheapest thing in life, so, so far as finances were concerned, they felt they could hit on arriving. Tex had kept his credit sheet clear with fellows like Sabin and was proud of the fact. He always made that a point in life. Keep out of debt. He was forever preaching on the subject.

Col. Miller had gone out on a scouting trip to make that Willard and Fulton match. Dempsey was hitting here and there, but even now wasn't considered contender timber. Fulton was the big giant who seemed to have a chance against Willard. He was nearly as tall and his left hand had made him famous. Willard himself had watched Fulton's steady climb and thought his only chance to gather in any big money was to match himself with the former plasterer.

THE 'MAD HATTER'

Miller went the rounds, but didn't seem to get any offers worth while. War had left boxing, like every other amusement and sport, pretty well stranded.

There came a tip from Joe Mulvahill, the Danbury Hatter, that Connecticut was anxious to put on a Willard and Fulton match for the title. Joe, a hatmaker by trade, had the promotion bug.

Not knowing the Hatter, the colonel started for New York so that he could get in touch with Mulvahill. Joe met the colonel at the Astor Hotel and told him he had all of the politicians of Connecticut lined up and in his left vest pocket. Joe conned both the politicians and the good colonel. He told the politicians the colonel had "promised to plank down $10,000 in cold cash for charity if the bout were allowed to come into fair Connecticut."

The Hatter didn't tell the Colonel he had promised all of that dough. Joe was doing the best he could with the hope that Mr. Mulvahill would be carried in on a golden wave when the profits were counted. The Danbury Hatter never has been blamed for trying.

COL. MILLER INVESTIGATES

Strings were pulled right and left for two whole days. The Colonel was quite puzzled. He called me in and asked me to take a run up to get a first-hand earful of the Hatter's story. Surely something had gone amiss, since Connecticut was doing anything but camping on his doorstep. So I ups and goes into the Connecticut wilds looking for Danbury's "Mad Hatter."

Major's Seven Moores Make Writers Moan

CHICAGO, Feb. 12.—(AP.)—The more Moores able to stick with major league baseball clubs next season, the more moaning by baseball writers.

Seven Moores are under contract. And that's not the worst of it, three of them are James Moore. They are Pitcher James Stanford Moore, of the Chicago White Sox, Outfielder James William Moore, of the Athletics and Outfielder James Gregg Moore, of the New York Giants.

If the White Sox had hung on to their Moores, they would have James William and Randolph, in addition to James Stanford, the two former having worked for Charles Comiskey at one time or another.

The Moores themselves may become apprehensive at the possibility of confusion in the official averages—so it doesn't look as though any more Moores will make it merrier.

DUKE YEARLINGS COP

In a preliminary tussle, the Dukes' crack freshman aggregation enjoyed itself hugely in ringing up a decisive 34-to-15 victory over the Pitt Junior College quintet of Johnstown. The lineup:

Duke Frosh—34	Pitt Jr. Col.—15
Zerilla	F	Rishell
Davies	F	Mood
Reehner	C	Kunkle
Moore	G	Grabados
Foster	G	Wingard

Substitutions—Silverstein, Kronkoite, MacDougal, Baker, Barbaise, Verner, Cyrcone, Kalloway. Field goals—Zerilla, Silverstein, MacDougall, Brenner 4, Moore 3, Verner 2, Reiter 3, Barbaise, Kalloway 4, Kunkle, Davies. Fouls—Duke, none out of 2. Pitt Juniors, 5 out of 10. Referee—Buck Snyder.

Tonight's court card in addition to the Tech-American U. game, calls for a clash at Morgantown between West Virginia and Georgetown, a return affair, and the Broaddus-Salem game at Salem.

CHARITY TILT CARDED

LATROBE, Pa., Feb. 12.—(AP.)—St. Vincent's little team of basketball Bearcats, which all but upset the Panthers, of the University of Pittsburgh, last season despite such opposition stars as Charley Hyatt, is going to get another chance. St. Vincent's and Pitt will meet here in a week in a charity game sponsored by the Latrobe Chamber of Commerce.

Eddie Kane's Widow Sues Sammy Mandell

NEW YORK, Feb. 12.—(INS.)—Mrs. Katherine Kane, widow of Eddie Kane, former manager of Sammy Mandell, erstwhile world lightweight champion, wants the boxer to pay her $17,733.

Mrs. Kane in a suit claims in July of last year Mandell and Kane signed an agreement to split evenly all money earned by the pugilist. She claims further that Kane received only $14,285 from more than $64,000 paid Mandell for a bout here last summer, after the signing of the contract with Al Singer.

LOCAL SQUASH STARS ENTER TITLE PLAY

The Pittsburgh Squash Racquets Association has named the tentative personnel of the team that will compete in the national amateur squash racquets tournament at Buffalo, February 21, 22 and 23. Five of the seven players will be McCook Reed, K. A. C. champ, and F. S. White, former national title-holder, and a K. A. C. entry. Percy Sivcid, P. A. A., Frank McClintock, University Club, and Dave Gilmore, of the Allegheny Country Club.

G. I. Stocking, K. A. C. and West Penn champion, and Scotty Burke, P. A. A. ace, are likely to round out the team, which leaves Friday, February 20.

Robinson Leads Race for Crown

SARANAC LAKE, N. Y., Feb. 12.—(AP.)—Ross Robinson, of Toronto, holder of the Canadian national title, appeared well on his way toward victory in the North American amateur speed skating championship today as the competitors moved on from Saranac Lake to Lake Placid for the last two days of competition.

Winning the five-mile race in 14.31 2-5, close to record time, Robinson increased his total to 50 points for two days of skating. Ray Murray, of New York, who did not place in yesterday's only senior championship event, was second with 40. O'Neil Farrell, of Chicago, finished third in the five-mile to get third place in the totals with 30 points.

LEADERS THINK BEAR CYCLE AT END

By MERRYLE S. RUKEYSER,
Universal Service.

NEW YORK, Feb. 12.—Have we gone beyond the end of the bear cycle?

Looking at the issue from the standpoint of business, James A. Farrell, president of the United States Steel Corporation, is already on record to the effect that we have passed the low point.

Mr. Rukeyser

The largest buyer in the world of American common stocks, Thomas B. Macaulay, president of the Sun Life Assurance Society of Canada, in his annual report said:

"The stock market generally discounts an improvement in earnings several months ahead, and I am inclined to believe that time will show that the low day of the stock market was on December 16 last."

INDIVIDUAL RESPONSIBILITY

The record of the last year has emphasized the individual responsibility of the business man and the investor to answer these crucial questions for himself, but in doing so it is perfectly sound practice to give due weight to the opinions of outside authorities.

On behalf of his company, Mr. Macaulay has been the largest scale practitioner in the realm of the common stock for long term investment doctrine. When I called on Mr. Macaulay at Montreal some months ago, he told me that he is learning something new every day. Although past 70, Mr. Macaulay has the energies and open mindedness of youth. In his report, he announces a significant shift in his earlier view that investors should never sell good common stocks.

TIMES TO SELL

He said:

"Though our investments have been subjected to a test of unparalleled severity, and have emerged triumphant, the experiences of the past 18 months have been useful in other respects. We have learned that even for permanent investors there may occasionally be a time to sell as well as a time to buy. Years ago, to avoid any suggestion of speculation we adopted the policy of permanent holding, protecting ourselves against reaction by building up huge margins of safety.

"We did not depart from this policy even in the summer of 1929 when the excess of market prices beyond the prices at which our stocks were listed in our assets had risen to a figure so huge that I will not even mention it. While the policy of permanent holding is absolutely sound in principle there may come times of abnormal inflation when it may be prudent to modify it, when, in fact, it will be wise to convert excess of market values into cash profit. In other words there may be a time to sell as well as a time to buy, and the time to buy is certainly when everything is deflated, money scarce, bidders few and prices low."

AGGRESSIVE SALES PROMOTION NOW IN ORDER

By J. H. VAN DEVENTER

Did you ever lose your foothold while climbing a mountain, and have the experience of sliding down a steep incline? There is very little that you can do about it until you reach the bottom, except to instinctively relax so as to make the bumps hurt as little as possible. Once the bottom of the decline is reached, if you are still alive and kicking and as game as mountain climbers must be, you will forget the recent bumps and tackle the ascent again with redoubled effort.

When business encounters one of the occasional avalanches that are met in its upward climb, there is little it can do except curl itself into a ball and hope to reach bottom safely. During the downslide, protective tactics seem to best suit the circumstances.

Once the bottom has been reached, the live members of business and industry abandon the protective tactics of retrenchment and turn again to an aggressive pursuit of bigger and better business. They realize that staying curled up in a ball won't get them anywhere.

Right now, many concerns are girding themselves for a year of extraordinary sales promotion effort, realizing that their selling program during the coming months will be effective in proportion to its being aggressive and carefully planned. They realize that a business pickup is individualistic and will not carry along those who refuse to use their own legs.

The concerns whose records will be most favorable this year are already chipping out their own toe holds for the upward climb. They are increasing their advertising efforts, giving their employes the assurance that their jobs are secure and capitalizing this sense of security by setting quotas of business and demanding the initiative and co-operation needed to meet them. They are making sure of their share of the pickup.

MESTA PROFIT AT RECORD

Officials of the Mesta Machine Company stated yesterday that the annual report to be ready for publication soon will show net profit of about $2,500,000. After deducting dividends this would be equivalent to $3.98 a share on 600,000 shares of common stock.

High records were established in both sales and earnings. In 1929 net profit was $1,797,242 which was equivalent to $2.81 a share on the basis of the present capitalization. In 1928 net profit was $1,051,473 or $1.56 a share.

The company produces heavy rolling mill machinery for steel mills. Last year its business reflected the great amount of expansion work being carried out by the steel industry. In spite of the current depression in the steel business, a large volume of new business has been booked and profits at a continued high rate are assured for some time to come.

Oldest U. S. Bank To Get New President

NEW YORK, Feb. 12.—The oldest bank in the United States is to have a new president. John C. Traphagen, until recently a vice president of the Chase National Bank, is expected soon to become president of the Bank of New York and Trust Company which was founded by Alexander Hamilton in 1784 as the Bank of New York.

Mr. Traphagen will be elected a member of the board of trustees March 10 and shortly thereafter will be elected president, succeeding Edwin G. Merrill, who has served in that capacity for nine years and will become chairman of the board.

HARBISON NET OFF $1 PER SHARE

H. W. Croft See Signs of Trade Recovery—Stresses Importance of Research

The annual report of the Harbison-Walker Refractories Company showed net profit for 1930 of $3,811,558 after deducting depreciation, depletion and taxes. This was equivalent to $2.53 a share on 1,440,000 shares of common stock after deducting preferred dividends. In 1929 net profit was $5,256,413 or $3.53 a share.

While business is showing indications of improvement over the last half of 1930, it is as yet too early to prophesy with accuracy as to conditions over any considerable portion of the year, according to remarks of H. W. Croft, chairman of the board. Only with the resumption of business as a whole can earnings return to a satisfactory basis, he declared.

In discussing the developments of the past year, Mr. Croft said:

"The net profit of $3,811,558 earned for the year, as a whole, may be considered fairly satisfactory under the conditions existing. While the profits of the first half were good and showed a considerable improvement over the same period in the preceding year, the last half reflected the abnormally depressed conditions of business generally. Extreme recession in the iron and steel industry and the subnormal requirements for new construction, made doubly evident the value of the wide diversification in the character of your company's products.

"Not only has the physical condition of your properties been fully maintained, but further progress in the program of modernization has continued. The supreme importance of research is also recognized in the constantly increasing appropriations set aside for the purpose.

"During the year your company has acquired for cash, the plant and fire clay properties of the United States Refractories Company located at Barrett, Pa. This plant, in excellent physical condition, adds 12 million brick to the annual capacity of your company and the additional mineral resources augment its reserves of high grade fire clay advantageously located both as to the Barrett and your other fire brick plants in the Clearfield district."

CORPORATE EARNINGS

United States Gypsum Company reports for year ended December 31, 1930, net income of $5,408,685 after depreciation, depletion and federal taxes, comparing with net of $3,102,300 in 1929.

P. Lorillard Company reports for year ended December 31, net income of $3,614,262 after interest, federal taxes, etc., against $1,336,656 in 1929.

Mohawk Carpet Mills reports for year to December 31, 1930, loss was $599,779 after depreciation and other charges, but before inventory write-off, amounting to $824,269, which was charged against surplus account, leaving 1929 net income after charges and federal taxes was $1,812,140, equal to $3.02 a share on 600,000 shares.

Southern Railway Company preliminary 1930 net income is $9,126,552 after taxes and charges, equal after preferred dividends to $4.72 a share on 1,298,200 shares of common stock, against $18,128,787 in 1929, or $14.65 a common share.

Some Banking Reputations Due for Jolt

By B. C. FORBES

WHY WAS the Bank of United States, eight of whose chief officials and directors have been indicted on serious charges, allowed by the State Banking Department to keep open long after Superintendent Joseph A. Broderick became convinced that the institution was being mismanaged?

B. C. Forbes.

This question is being asked frequently and bitterly, especially by depositors who have the idea that they would have suffered less had the institution been closed a year or eighteen months earlier.

I have been digging thoroughly into the facts, and the truth is that never probably in banking history were so many different attempts made to save depositors of an institution from losing any of their money.

ONE SUCH attempt reached the stage where an official announcement was made very shortly before the bank closed—that a merger involving this bank and three others had been arranged, with J. Herbert Case, chairman of the New York Federal Reserve Bank, as head of the combination.

That plan, which everyone acclaimed and which was accepted as having been definitely agreed upon, suddenly was spoiled by the wholly unlooked-for kicking over of the traces by the head of one of the four interested institutions—not the Bank of United States.

HERE, BRIEFLY, is the history of what preceded the final closing of the Bank of United States in December.

Superintendent Broderick took charge of a very badly demoralized State Banking Department in April, 1929, former Superintendent Warder is now in jail. Shortly after taking office, he insisted, without authority of law, upon examining holding companies, investment trusts and security companies affiliated with banking institutions, and among the very first to receive attention was the Bank of the United States and its affiliated Bankus Corporation and other subsidiaries. Not one new merger or new branch of the Bank of United States was approved after Mr. Broderick took office.

The conditions discovered caused the bank superintendent to urge upon the bank's chief officials—Messrs. Marcus, Mitchell, Singer, Kugel, Kresel, etc.—that too many officials and directors were real estate men, that too much of the business done was in the real estate field rather than in commercial banking, and also that there was altogether too close connection between the bank and the Bankus Corporation.

Assurances were given that merger negotiations, which would bring in new management, would be immediately undertaken, that the criticized practices and policies would be changed, and that the two principal holders of the bank's stock (Marcus and Singer) would not sell until the situation had been remedied.

THEN FOLLOWED an endless series of merger negotiations. Early in September, 1929, a large institution manifested interest. In the same month a private banking firm opened negotiations. In October the newspapers reported that new interests had arranged to take control. But the stock panic burst before the plan was carried through and squashed everything.

THE BANK department kept urging the bank to become more liquid and it actually did so, notwithstanding the panicky conditions.

Toward the end of March a big trust company opened negotiations but they fell through. The bank department again, in March, examined the Bankus Corporation and again submitted the facts to the officers. In June nearly 150 bank examiners and others were put on the job, supplemented by Federal Reserve examiners, to make the now famous investigation of the whole situation.

The next proposal was for the four-party merger, including the Manufacturers Trust, Public National Bank of United States and International Trust. A large downtown banking firm and a big trust company also became interested.

The examiner's report, completed in September, convinced the Banking Department that a merger was the only way out for the U. S. Bank. A fresh series of negotiations began. The four-bank merger, as already told, was practically settled when, to the amazement of all, one of the parties "bolted." Negotiations with a leading trust company were resumed. Representatives of the clearing house were called in.

FROM November 10 to early in the morning of December 11 innumerable conferences were held, attended by leading bankers, Federal Reserve officials, banking department representatives, etc.

THE BANK of Manhattan Trust Company, it then became known, was ready to take over the Bank of United States if the deal could be arranged immediately, but this solution was blocked by the legal requirement that a meeting of stockholders be called, thus necessitating two or three weeks' delay. Other negotiations were taken up, and on December 10 a plan to raise ample capital and to reorganize the bank was indorsed by leading New York bankers, acting in the interest of the community, but at the last moment one or two bankers refused to go along.

That was the last straw.

WHEN THE whole inside story comes to be told in court, certain New York bankers are not likely to be left with much of a reputation for public-spiritedness.

Banks, Exchanges Remain Closed For Holiday

All security and commodity markets in the country, including the Pittsburgh Stock Exchange and local banks, remained closed today in observance of Lincoln's birthday. Markets and financial institutions will reopen tomorrow at the regular hours.

The Federal Reserve statement of brokers' loans will be released tomorrow afternoon instead of today and the statements of condition of the Federal Reserve banks will be made public Saturday morning instead of Friday morning.

Electric Power Output Declines

Production of electricity by the electric light and power industry of the United States for the week ended February 7 continued the decline in previous recent weeks. The total 1,675,794,000 kilowatt hours, compared with 1,686,749,000 for the previous week, was 5.9 per cent below figures for the like week of 1930, the National Electric Light Association reports. The figure also showed a decrease of 2.3 per cent from the corresponding week of 1929.

Atlantic Refining Assumes Contract

Atlantic Pipe Line Company, a subsidiary of Atlantic Refining Company, has assumed the five-year contract recently made by Saxet Oil Company, with Gulf Coast Pipe Line Company, for the sale of production of Saxet Oil Company, in the Refugio field up to 5,000 barrels of oil a day, at posted prices prevailing in that field.

Capital Disbursed by Distributive Trusts

By GEORGE H. SNYDER.

ONE OF THE FUNDAMENTAL differences between the types of fixed investment trusts is found in the disposition made of the various kinds of receipts. In addition to cash dividends, the trustees receive stock dividends, split-ups of the holdings in their portfolio, and rights to purchase additional stock.

The fixed investment trusts pay all their earnings on underlying stocks in their investment portfolios to their shareholders. Cash dividends naturally are income and are distributed. Fixed trusts cannot purchase stocks in addition to the amounts specified at the time of their organization. This makes it impossible to exercise rights. Accordingly all rights are sold and the proceeds are included in payments to shareholders.

According to conservative accounting practices stock dividends and split-ups of stocks are not earnings. Some investment trusts retain the additional shares received from this source in their investment portfolios while others sell all shares received and distribute the proceeds to their shareholders. The fixed trusts which keep stock dividends and split-ups are called cumulative trusts. Those which sell them and distribute the proceeds are known as maximum distribution trusts.

Split-ups Are Not Income

THERE IS MUCH misunderstanding about the significance of stock dividends and split-ups of stocks. This is due to the complicated structures of some of our large corporations. For the sake of illustration let us assume that a small company has been formed by 100 investors. Each of these investors has put an equal amount of money into the enterprise and has received one share of stock in return for his money.

Let us assume that, after this corporation has been in existence for some time, the directors decide to split the stock on a two-for-one basis. In other words, each of the 100 investors will be given two shares of new stock for the original share which he bought in the company. After this split takes place the investors have no more wealth than before the change in capitalization. Each of them merely holds two shares which are worth no more than the original share. The stockholders are no richer than before the split. The food value of a piece of pie is not increased by cutting it in two.

Stock Dividends Are Similar

STOCK DIVIDENDS ARE merely another form of a split in stock. They do not increase the wealth of the stockholders. Not only has this been recognized by accountants but it has been ratified by a decision of the United States Supreme Court which declared that stock dividends are not incomes and are not subject to income tax.

Corporations declare stock dividends and make split-ups because of the psychological effect on the market value of their securities. Action of this kind is also taken when the value of individual shares of stocks becomes too high to make wide distribution of holdings possible. Some corporations which reinvest a portion of their earnings in their business each year pay stock dividends in recognition of this practice. But the shareholders are not made any richer by the payment of the stock dividends.

Capital Distributed

THE FIXED INVESTMENT trusts which sell their stock dividends and split-ups and distribute the proceeds are actually returning a portion of their capital to their shareholders although this is not generally realized.

In some years this return of capital to the shareholders of investments trusts will not be large but in exceptional years it can widely distort the yield of distributive fixed trusts and, unless properly explained, can seriously mislead investors. In 1930 more than 80 per cent of the yield of one leading fixed trust represented distribution of capital. Less than 20 per cent of the return would have been classed as legitimate income by a conservative accountant.

The effects of this distribution of capacital by the maximum distribution trusts will be discussed in this column tomorrow.

. . . It is a honey of a tune, however. . . . Wonder if it is true that Helen and Arthur Loew won't do that altar thing after all? . . . Ditto on the talk that Otto H. Kahn paid Billy Rose, producer of "Sweet and Low," a terrific sum to release Hannah Williams from her agreement—so she could wed his boy, Roger? . . . Mad about that verse to "Overnight," which goes: I don't know why but the thrill is gone / And what was—can't go on / I only know that the flame is cold . . . Love was young—now it's old.

Fate is too cruel at times. . . . That accident at the State Fair Coliseum in Detroit, fixample. . . . When the trapeze artists, Carl and Katherine Solt, were doing their specialty high in the air before 10,000 thrilled auditors. . . . Carl was hanging by his knees on the trapeze, and holding his wife by the hands. . . . Then he whirled her into the air, catching her toes. . . . When he tried a second whirl, their fingers touched, but not long enough. . . . She died five minutes later, poor thing. . . . They were to have retired at the end of this season, spending the rest of their lives on a model farm, near Denver, Ind., their home town. . . . Carl must feel so alone now. . . . Schiller thought: "What is so universal as death must be a benefit."

Detroit must be a nice place in which to dwell at that. . . . I mean, if the wet wash stitch-re-ay-shun there is all they tell you it is. . . . Windsor, Ontario, being but a nickel away through the tunnel reserved for autos. . . . Where the rye costs $2.30, the Scotch $4.55 per bottle. . . . The best nose-paint they add costs no more there. . . . The fines are severe, however, if you are caught drinking in public. . . . One lad while in his car, driving back from Windsor to Detroit, was caught garching a bottle of beer. . . . They nicked him for $200. . . . Good gald! . . . The beer is but three smackers per case—but BEER!

Dr. Gillet, who is renowned in Yurrah for his paralysis cures by massaging the nose, was welcomed by the local rags, but the government is holding him up in his service to humanity with its red tapestry. . . . The day he arrived he got 325 phone calls from sufferers begging him to comfort them. . . . But they must suffer and wait until some official decides that the good Doctor is in order. . . . Einstein, who can only give you the headache, is given the Key to the City! . . . More know Tom Fool than Tom Fool knows.

I think Dr. Seuss is grand. . . . He says that a compliment is when you say something to another which he and we know is not true. . . . The Wesley Ruggles and Peggy Joyce thing can't be that serious? . . . That bathing-suited shapely thing swinging in the electric lights at 46 Gs is Louise Evans, and all is Something to See. . . . It is amazing how some women after being divorced or parted from their men, awaken, and make themselves more alluring. . . . That attorney's discarded wife, frinstance. . . . When she used to sit with him in a delicatessen booth night after night, she appeared so ordinary. . . . At the Richman the other 3 a. m., her eyes sparkled under the mascara-beads. . . . Her arms were so white. . . . Her lips so red. . . . The wave in her hair. . . . Her slim lines. . . . Her evening gown hugged in the Cleopatra manner. . . . There was once a church debate, it is said, over whether or not a woman was a human being. . . . Wonder how many people have noticed that all the sarcasms on women to be found in Shakespeare are put into the mouths of villains!

Indiana 'Bone Dry' Law Laid to Klan

INDIANAPOLIS, Feb. 12.—(AP.)—Boyd Gurley, Indianapolis editor, told the Indiana House of Representatives Committee on Public Morals that the Wright "bone dry" law, the state's stringent prohibition enforcement act, was dictated by D. C. Stephenson, former Ku Klux Klan official now serving a life sentence in state prison for murder.

Addressing a hearing before the committee on a bill proposed to repeal the Wright law, Gurley said passage of the law was celebrated in a local hotel by a liquor party.

Bar Harbor Splits Over Road Program

WASHINGTON, Feb. 12.—(AP.)—Fashionable Bar Harbor is in a wrangle over 13 miles of road and Secretary Wilbur is attempting to settle it.

The summer colony is sharply divided over the offer of John D. Rockefeller, Jr., of $4,000,000 for road construction in and around Acadia National Park. Some of the summer residents claim the beauty of Mount Desert Island would be spoiled by road building.

RAISE CRIPPLED MAYFLOWER

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 12 (AP.)—Crippled, flame-scarred and smeared with slime and grease, the U. S. S. Mayflower was raised from the bottom of the Delaware River yesterday.

The former Ship, white presidential yacht sank at a pier in the Philadelphia Navy Yard after fire had swept the craft on January 24. It was being made ready for re-commissioning as the flagship of the survey fleet in Caribbean waters.

Pumps and other apparatus for raising the ship were brought here from Norfolk and scores of men had been engaged in the work since the night of the fire.

No announcement as to the extent of the damage was made after the Mayflower had been floated. It was stated that the craft would ride at its pier until the board of inquiry completed its investigation of the cause of the blaze.

In Memoriam 1-B

In loving memory of our dear father, William Hatch, who entered into rest one year ago today. What would we give to clasp his hand, his voice to hear, his smile that meant so much to us. Sadly missed by his daughters, Mrs. Helen Hogan and Mrs. Oliver Hughes.

In loving memory of Margarette Hebold, Passed away, February 12, 1929. Loving and kind in all her ways, Upright and just to end of her days. Sweet soul, true, a friend indeed, Beautiful memories she left behind. HUSBAND, CHILDREN, GRANDCHILDREN.

In loving memory of our dear mother, Mary C. Willome, who departed this life two years ago today, February 12, 1929. Sadly missed by her daughter and son.

Maid Confesses Love for Jim in Letter

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

Connie Calvert shares her home and fortune with her half-sister, Kitty, whom she found destitute in New York's underworld. Kitty falls in love with Jim Tracy, Connie's former fiance. Believing Jim to be a fortune-hunter, Connie, to save Kitty, enlists the aid of Duke Garson, Kitty's friend and underworld intelligence man. He warns Connie that her butler is a crook and that her mother should guard her pearls. Later, Duke is about to declare his love for Connie when Jim appears. He claims he was held up and is afraid to go home. Connie invites him to stay. Duke doubts Jim's story. That night, Mrs. Calvert's pearls are stolen. Duke questions the maid about them. The maid doubts Kitty's honesty. Mrs. Calvert becomes ill after the excitement. Duke accuses Jim of lying about being held up. Jim says he lied because he did not trust Duke and wanted to get back to the Calvert home. Connie tells her mother that she is not sure whether she loves Duke. Duke seeks the butler's aid to solve the robbery mystery. The butler suspects the maid. While out riding with Connie, Duke says she is a new thrill in his life. When he kisses her she is powerless to resist. Late that night Connie is alarmed when she hears a noise in the house. She summons Duke and he discovers the maid hiding in a closet. She refuses to give an explanation. Connie and Duke take a note they see under Jim's door.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER LVIII.

Garson's arm felt the restraining pressure of Connie's hand.

"It's a little tricky to take it, but we don't have to read it, if it's really from Kitty," she said. "It's like telling a white lie. Wait."

She moved swiftly, silently and in an instant she had in her hand the white folded sheet of paper. Unhesitatingly she opened it and glanced at the bottom for the signature. Garson, watching her, saw her face change and she looked at him steadily and nodded.

"M. Smith," she whispered.

Folding the paper, she pressed it in her hand. "No more now, for them to prolong this hushed scene in the hall. We'll read it downstairs."

Read the Letter

Characteristically Connie herself did not look again at the letter until she was fully dressed and in the library with Garson, where she put it into his hands.

"Sit here," he said, pushing over on a leather davenport. She sat beside him. They were so close together that her head was almost on his shoulder. Together they read the letter written with pencil on ruled paper. Its primness of handwriting was in sharp contrast to what was written:

"My dear one—I've tried all day to get word with you alone, but impossible. Have been almost crazy ever since that other woman moved in the house. You can't imagine the hell I've gone through, dear Jim, watching her steal you away and cramping you out of your senses. You know I love you like no other woman on earth ever loved you, dear. I've stayed awake a hundred nights dreaming of you and yearning to be in your arms, even if you never cared for me that deep. I know I haven't got the education or the money that these other girls have got, but they couldn't make you happy like I could. I'd be a dog for you or a slave. I'd go to hell for you and be glad of the chance to burn up, because I know what it is to love so hard there couldn't be any limit to what I'd go through for your sake, Jim. Do you remember that one night when you ran across me out on the lawn and we walked down to the gate? You put your arms around me and kissed me and since then I've not been the same girl.

"You're the only man I ever loved and, God knows, I'm willing to die for you or throw myself down under your feet and let you walk on me. Sometimes I almost go crazy shut up in my room and knowing you are out making love to other girls and they making love to you. If my standing in life was different and I had money, darling, I know these other girls wouldn't have a chance. I want to tell you that I have got a hundred times more love in my heart for you than anyone else has and there won't be any trouble about money, either. As I said, I'd die for you or do anything else and I have done something else for your sake, darling. I know you haven't got as much money as the people you run with, but don't worry. Why should they have everything and you have practically nothing? What did they ever do to earn what they got? They've got more than they'll ever be able to spend, and a little less or more won't hurt them, Jim. I know you think I'm a bad girl and awful, but I love you so terribly much, so terrible much. Sometimes it seems like my brains will come out from thinking about you so much, Jim, for God's sake leave the other girls alone and get in touch with me. It will be for your good and for mine.

"I've got enough now, Jim. I can get you set up in a business of your own so you won't have to worry and take orders from other people. I did it because I love you so much that no sacrifice is too great for me. I'd be willing to die or go to jail or anything for your sake, Jim. I don't even ask you to marry me if you will just love me a little and let me see you sometimes where there won't be anyone around to bother. I want to be with you and let you know what is in my heart. I'm sure you will not regret it and you will make me happy, the happiest girl on earth. Maybe you think I'm crazy, crazy in love with you, but you know that. I've told you so once before when I had a chance. You were so sweet to me then.

Wants to See Him

"None of these other people are your equal either, so I don't feel so badly about that part of it. Don't, for God's sake, look right through me and treat me like dirt. Give me a chance to tell you what I have on my mind. It's all for you, darling boy, and you will find that I will be a true and loving friend to you till the breath goes out of my body. Meet me tomorrow night, anytime after midnight, down under the elm tree at the gate on the left hand side, because I will be waiting there. Please be there, Jim, please, as I have something for you and it's for your advantage to be there. I'm not lying, on my word of honor. Goodnight, my wonderful sweetheart. It's been a relief to me just to write these things because they have been bottled up in my heart until I've been almost crazy.

"Always, Your Sweetheart,

"M. SMITH."

Garson slowly folded the closely written missive, his face serious. A moisture glistened on Connie's lids.

"I think it is pitiful, too pathetic," she said softly.

He nodded.

"I don't think, however, Tracy ought to see this," he said slowly. "I can't understand what it is about a man like him that fascinates women even without loving him. You once intended to marry him. Kitty adores him and even this poor half-demented creature has fallen under his spell—yet he is no wonderful person. He is mildly good looking and he has a sort of social gift, but his destiny seems to menace the lives of women."

"Women are so foolish," Connie admitted. "Poor Mary Smith . . . now we know what became of mother's pearls."

"We'll get the pearls back all right," Garson assured her, "but it may be a little difficult to convince Kitty about this."

There was one thing, nevertheless, that was not difficult. Enfolded in Duke Garson's arms, Connie lost all interest in the affairs of others. . . .

DAILY TRUE STORY 'Smart'

Lawyer Truxton peered over the tops of his spectacles at Jed Rawlin, speculatively.

He's no half-brother of mine, Judge. My old man married his mother when he was just a kid. She was a widder woman,"

"I see—yes, to be sure, so it says here in his will, half to his widder if livin' or to his stepson, Kent, if she is deceased."

"Yup, and no danged sense to it."

"It's a good will. Your father mentions that she took good care of him. You can't go and bust it. Where is this Kent Burgess?"

"Last I heard of him he was teachin' school down in th' Virginia peanut belt—helluva job for a he man! Why not let wimmin teach school?

"Got his address?"

"Yup. He wrote when he read about the old man kickin' off. I got th' letter, silly thing with a lot of hifalutin' words about how much he thought of th' old man."

"I ain't no lawyer, but it strikes me that there's nothin' in th' will as to how it will be divided or who will divide it. Seems to me if I give him a full half, foot for foot, there won't be no kick if I give him th' northeast half."

Truxton nodded slowly and studied the map.

"I been all over it since you put this up to me, Jed. I get you exactly. That south half is a good six foot deep with rich soil and a natural irrigation basin. The upper half is pretty good, too."

"Good for what, I'd like to know?"

"Cactus and coyotes mostly. It's got the old cabin on it and Cato Creek runs half a mile through it. Yes, I'll have it done accurate; if anything, give him a foot or two the best of it for appearance and move some old fencin' over and fence it."

Jed Rawlin grinned. He hadn't been mistaken in Lawyer Truxton. The old shyster was quite willing to fall into his plans—for the consideration offered.

Away in the East, in the village of Ledlow, Kent Burgess was a most unhappy young man.

Inherits Land

It wasn't so much the miserly pittance he received for teaching the village school, nor was it the long, flat stretches of fawn-colored soil where the goobers thrived that distressed him, as it was the report of Doc Lyman.

"You got to hit for the high country, young man," the doctor had told him with a bluntness that was really a kindness. "Out West is better, but this here part of the country is going to knock that bum lung of yours out of commission in no time and start on the other."

The prospects were mighty poor. Kent Burgess could just about travel West on his savings—and then what?

He lived in a little white-washed shack with Cudjo. Whoever named the big, powerful yet child-like Negro "Cudjo" had evidently been a lover of the old J. T. Trowbridge fiction. Cudjo took care of Kent. He knew about Kent's coughs and what they meant.

Kent was no coward or a fool. He knew well enough that the doctor was right.

Naturally, when he received notification from the legal firm in Fresno of Austin & Austin that he had inherited half of the Rawlin Valley property, he was convinced of two things—that God tempered the wind to the shorn lamb and that he would go West—taking Cudjo along.

In the office of Austin & Austin in Fresno he was told that he would undoubtedly be given the poorest half, as no provision had been made as to which half, and Jed Rawlin, as son of the testator, could claim right to making the division.

It was all right with Kent. He and Cudjo went up to the cabin to live, and then Kent understood.

He was up on a sort of mesa, dry and of not much value save in some places where gardens and fruit trees might grow. Down the valley he saw the fertile acres that Jed had taken, the irrigation ditches, the young fruit trees already set out.

Jed Amazed

Well, that was all right. Jed was the old man's own son and Kent was but the son of the old man's second wife by a former marriage.

He had no kick. He was singing most of the time. The "bum lung" was no longer "bum" and he was feeling better every day.

Jed Rawlings had been to see him when he arrived, muttered a sort of greeting, said he hoped he would get along all right, assured him that he had a full half of the property, and had never been near him after that.

But every month, now, Kent drove over the west slope to Madera rather than to Fresno. Jed learned of this and wondered, for Fresno was nearer.

What he saw startled him. For days he used his glasses.

There was no mistaking what Kent Burgess was doing. Jed could make out the pan and the sifter. Kent went almost daily to the creek. He worked steadily with a pan and with sieve.

More than that, the black man took sacks of something up to the cabin.

Jed studied that portion of the creek that ran through his half. He knew well enough that there would be little trace of the dust in the black loam bottom of the creek. Up there on Kent's half the creek bottom was sandy.

Now over on the western slope, some 40 miles beyond this, was the handsomest little place Kent had ever seen. It had a Spanish bungalow by a private lake and some 500 acres of wonderful orchards. The owner had died. The place was for sale. Eastern heirs wanted the money. Kent sighed. It would take him 10 to 15 years to accumulate enough money for that, but it didn't hurt him to dream about it.

Then came a letter from Lawyer Truxton. If Mr. Burgess would call at his office some deal might be transacted to his interest.

Kent went. Jud was in a back room.

"My client," said Truxton, "who is sort of related to you, wants to own the whole outfit. It's more for sentimental reasons than anything else. Now there's no need to waste words. You think it's valuable and we won't argue, but you couldn't make a real fortune out of it all alone like that, so he's ready to offer you plenty."

"That is an elastic word," Kent said. "To some 'plenty' might mean only a loaf of bread and a ham on the table; to others it might mean a million."

"Are you crazy? The property ain't worth a quarter of a million," Truxton thundered in his best attempt to bluff.

"What makes you think it isn't?"

"Spot cash, yes."

The deal was made. Kent Burgess and Cudjo drove over the slope and bought the beautiful fruit ranch with its hilltop Spanish bungalow and private lake and settled down to profitable enjoyment.

It was months later that Lawyer Truxton called on him.

Questioned by Lawyer

"Will you tell me why the devil and all you panned and sifted day after day back there when there wasn't a grain of gold dust within miles?" he demanded.

"Sure, sure, Judge Truxton," Kent answered cheerfully. "I was sifting out fine gravel that I put up and wholesaled to bird stores and I put up a bird food also. I got my living that way waiting for my little fruit grove to bear—why do you ask?"

"Don't tell me," Kent said, innocently, "that Jed Rawlin thought I was panning gold?"

"Boy, you're pretty dam' smart. I'll bet you knew he was watchin' you and thought you was panning gold!"

"Judge," said Kent, also dropping one eyelid, "you, too, are pretty dam' smart!"

Eyes Lifted Up to Lincoln

His Words of Simple Faith and Courage Point Way for Nation to Triumph Over Its Difficulties.

Today, a little more than six score years ago, Abraham Lincoln was born, in 1809.

On this anniversary of that day of auspicious token for his country, we lift up our eyes to the name of Lincoln, as unto the hills from whence cometh our help.

It is never in vain that we turn to Lincoln for inspiration, guidance, strength or courage. So many sided and all-embracing was his great humanity, that we find in the record of his life, support and teaching in every period of difficulty or perplexity that besets us.

Is it industrial depression, with its resultant unemployment, that weighs down our spirit, or the wide-spread suffering in the wake of an unprecedented drought that stirs our sympathy to anguish?

Is it the spectacle of world unrest, with the deepening of international hostility, that rises like a phantom before our gaze?

It may be the multiplying signs of demoralized justice, as administered in the courts, and the mounting evidence of contempt for law, which afflict us with misgivings for the country's future.

Again, it may be the contemplation of unregulated corporate power and the steady march of law defying greed, bending every utility in which the people's interest is supreme, into a means of further exploitation of the people; or the feeling that we are oppressed by a burden of taxation, which enlightened policy could alleviate by a more equitable apportionment and distribution.

NO MATTER WHAT IT IS, LET US NOT REPINE.

Let us recall Lincoln's words of simple faith and courage, uttered during the country's darkest hours,——when defeats, reverses, disappointments were following each other in agonizing succession and the stoutest hearts began to waver.

"THIS TOO WILL PASS," SAID LINCOLN.

And his trust in the virtue and intelligence of his people; in their moral presence of mind, when confronted with national peril; in their power to recognize a principle and to serve it with loyalty, carried him through and carried the nation through and saved the Union.

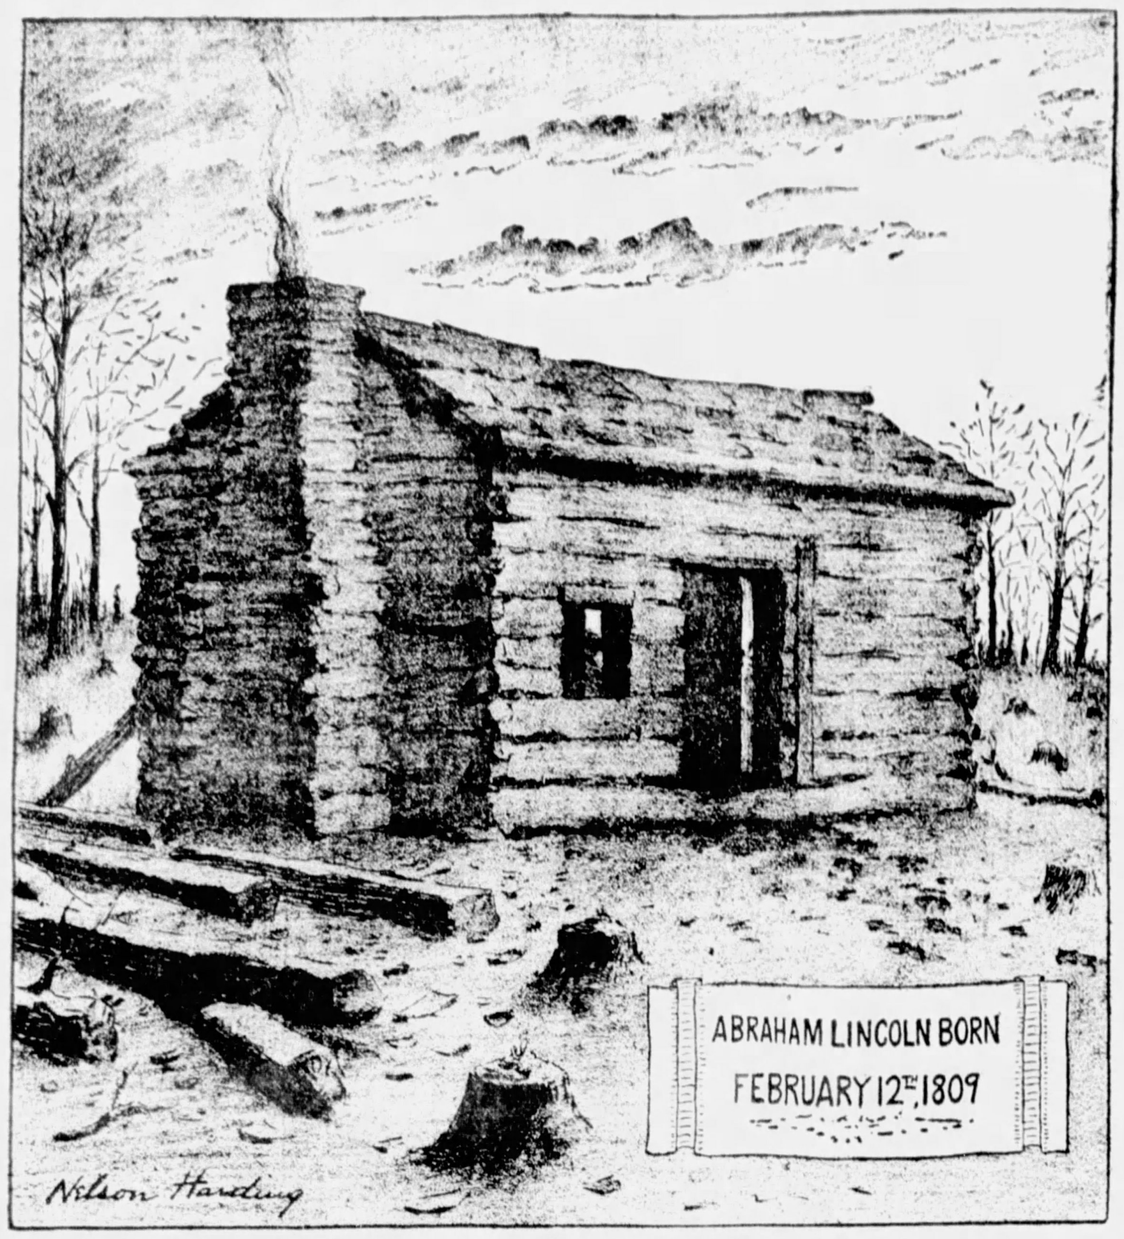
Well was it said, at his passing, that the common manhood of America had lost a kinsman.

A Never Forgotten Day

By Nelson Harding



In the youth of our Republic,
When the wilderness was conquered
By the pioneers and settlers,
By the plain and hardy people,
In the forests of Kentucky,
In a rude and humble cabin
There first saw the light of morning
He who is immortal, Lincoln. —N. H.

Secret Societies

Holding Companies In Field of Public Utilities Snap Fingers at Supervising Commissions.

By BAINBRIDGE COLBY.

A WITNESS testifying on the stand was asked if he belonged to any secret societies. He replied that he was a member of two—the Knights of Pythias and the gas company.

This story has antiquity, but it can readily be brought up to date by substituting the holding company for the gas company.

The device of a holding company has had a great expansion in the last few years, particularly in the field of public utilities.

Certain advantages are claimed to result from it, such as economy in group purchasing, expert management and expert engineering and construction.

BUT they are NEGLIGIBLE when viewed in connection with the secrecy which shrouds the operations of holding companies, the opportunities for manipulation of profits on inter-company transactions, the irresponsibility of their management and the speculative attitude and activities of their controlling interests, all of which are reflected in SOME WAY OR OTHER in the rate base, upon which charges for service to the CONSUMING PUBLIC are calculated.

These companies have become the "Hindenburg line" of COVETOUS and GREEDY PRIVILEGE. From their lawyer-manned ramparts they openly DERIDE public regulation and snap their fingers in contemptuous defiance of supervising commissions, whether federal or state.

THE ordinary citizen still has a naive belief that he is protected against extortion on the part of the gas companies, the electric companies, the power companies and such public utilities by public service commissions. He has a simple notion that the utility companies are restricted to a reasonable rate of return upon the amount of their invested capital and that the rates charged cannot be in excess of such reasonable return.

Did we say that this conception on the part of the average man is naive? It is more than that. IT IS GROTESQUE.

The local company which Mr. Citizen thinks is making and supplying his power or his light is not under the direction and control of its officers or managers.

With almost negligible exception, the local plant is owned, controlled and directed by a holding company, situated usually in some financial center, remote from the actual scene of its operations.

DOES the local company receive and apportion its earnings to the company's necessities? NO.

Does it finance its extensions of plant? NO.

Does it do such engineering work as the nature of its operations require? NO.

Does it conduct its own accounting? NO.

This is a subject of vital importance, because upon the accuracy and good faith of its accounting depend the rates it can charge consumers for its service.

Does the operating company buy its own materials and equipment? NO.

Does a report to the Public Service Commission by the operating company disclose the TRUE facts about its investment and its earnings, their use and apportionment to the needs of the operating company? NO.

ALL these things are done by the holding company. All these services are the basis of heavy charges by the holding company to the operating company.

Thus the customary "general service" or "management supervision fee" of one of the largest holding companies is 2 per cent of the GROSS earnings of each client company. The fees of its subsidiary construction companies amount to as much as 5 per cent of the sums expended in construction.

The holding company charges the operating company for its "consulting engineering services" and a special engineering fee for design work when required by the supervised companies.

The cost of rendering these services and the profits earned therefrom are not disclosed. Even federal investigation is DEFIED on the plea that these matters "constitute trade secrets."

THE efforts of the Federal Trade Commission to ascertain these hidden costs, which are such convenient taps and sluices for the earnings of the operating company, have been denounced as unauthorized and involving illegal compulsory disclosure of private matters.

In 1928, 81.9 per cent of the total electrical energy produced in the United States, was generated by companies under holding company control. This percentage has since increased as there is a constant extension of control over independent operating units.

Have not the people of the United States, in a precise sense, become merely another "subsidiary" of this vast holding interest, which reaches from ONE END OF THE COUNTRY TO THE OTHER?

IT IS unthinkable that the holding companies can continue indefinitely to assert their irresponsible detachment from public functions, which they practically direct and control, including an exemption from state or federal supervision.

They will not be suffered to cover their operations with secrecy — OPERATIONS WHICH VITALLY AFFECT THE PUBLIC INTEREST.

Favoritism in Contracts

Latitude Allowed Public Officials In Ordering Goods and Services Is Perhaps Too Great.

Five former officials of Luzerne County—three county commissioners, a country controller and a county engineer—are in jail for crookedness in awarding contracts for public work.

Only yesterday the charge was made in Philadelphia that the Board of Education had shown favoritism in the awarding of a large contract.

And here in Pittsburgh we have, of course, the case of Director Succop, of the Department of Supplies, who is accused of having shown undue partiality for certain bidders in purchasing foods and other materials for city institutions.

In all of these cases the allegation is that low bidders were ignored.

The excuse invariably offered by public officials for ignoring low bidders is that they were not "responsible" or their goods did not come up to the required specifications.

Recent developments raise the question if it would not be wise to restrict somewhat the latitude allowed officials in ordering goods and services.

An association of contractors proposed not long ago that standards should be adopted for their governance, so that they might clearly know, in advance of bidding for public work, if they conformed to the qualifications demanded of "responsible" bidders.

Similarly some method should be devised by which contractors might know in advance if the goods they sought to sell complied with specifications.

Deprived of part of the discretionary power now lodged in them, unscrupulous public officials would have less opportunity to hoodwink the public, discriminate against low bidders and squander the taxpayers' money.

Future of Coal Industry

Prosperity Will Depend In Large Part on the Utilization Made of Chemical Properties.

The Department of Commerce has just issued a study of the world's coal industry. The findings are of vital importance to Pittsburgh, since the city's welfare hinges largely on the prosperity of the coal business.

The salient feature of the report is the author's conclusion that "while necessarily a large amount of coal will continue to be employed in the generation of heat and power, an increasing part of its value in the future will consist in its chemical properties."

The use of coal for the generation of heat and power is declining. In many places water power, petroleum and other sources of energy are taking the place of coal. While coal seems destined to remain the chief source of steam and electric power, coal consumers have effected economies in its consumption, and the trend is in the direction of still greater saving.

The electric companies used 3.2 pounds of coal in 1919 to develop a kilowatt-hour of power. Now they need only 1.76 pounds. Similarly the railroads and iron and steel companies have reduced coal consumption. Coal supplied only 64 per cent of the nation's energy requirements in 1927, as compared with 82 per cent in 1917.

Great possibilities to increase the demand for coal lie, however, in the chemical processes by which it is separated into coke, tar and gas.

Dr. Thomas S. Baker, president of the Carnegie Institute of Technology, has called another international conference on bituminous coal to meet in Pittsburgh for the consideration of these chemical processes and the creation of new markets for coal and its by-products.

The conference should be of interest to every coal operator and every miner—to all who get their living directly or indirectly from the coal industry.

Marry-Go-Round

By HELEN ROWLAND

The Sweet and Lowdown

A "forced landing" is the one a man makes, when he starts out for a little diversion, and lands at the altar.

* * *

Falling in love, like stepping into a coal hole or running the car into a telegraph pole, is something that just "happens" to you when you aren't LOOKING for it. Love, like inspiration, is always a surprise!

At the first kiss, a woman's mind leaps to the altar — and there it has to wait for a man's consciousness to limp along and catch up.

* * *

As a baby, a man takes his kisses for granted; as a boy, he takes them as a punishment; as a youth, he takes them as an adventure; as a bachelor, he takes them as a stimulant—and as a husband, he takes them, just automatically, as a morning and evening chore.

* * *

There comes a time in every man's life, when he knows exactly what kind of woman would make him perfectly happy — usually about six months after he has married the OTHER kind.

* * *

A woman's regret at losing a susceptible husband to another woman is always counterbalanced by her relief at the thought of not having to keep her eye on him any longer.

A man values a woman's love according to her attraction for other men; a woman values a man's love according to his indifference to other women.

* * *

A man's love has to be repeatedly wound up, like a clock; but, once a woman's heart get's started, it is supposed to go on working, automatically forever no matter how many shocks it receives.

* * *

When the doctor orders "a change" for a modern husband, it doesn't necessarily mean that he should go away; most of them could get a complete change just by staying at home, occasionally.

Isn't It So?

Even when your promise is broken, it isn't all it's cracked up to be.

A broken promise may be repaired, but it can never be made as good as new.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, Feb. 12.—Broadway's two most extravagantly publicized figures in the past year were Texas Guinan and Rudy Vallee. A clipping bureau's check-up reveals each received free puffs that if paid for at space rates would total something more than a million.

A runner up for limelight honors was Legs Diamond. But Texas is the veteran in establishing a Page One halo and maintaining it. She is regarded as perpetual copy, especially by tabloids, and is the peg upon which is hung a thousand and one night life feature yarns.

She has no press agent anymore. When publicity fires burn low she merely fires off a barrage of typical Guinan telegrams and usually scores a bull's eye. Her almost constant companion in public is her handsome young brother Tommy.

No other Broadway figure has appeared so largely in modern fiction. She has been made the central character in two novels, at least a half hundred short stories and a dozen talkies and legitimate stage productions. Her autobiography is being written.

She has shrewdly created an aura of White Way glamour. To the world she has become the lanky, red haired hoyden—the nocturnal wise cracker with a heart of pure gold. Behind her rowdy "Hello sucker!" is a mawkish tenderness for the visiting spenders. And all that rot.

She is reputed never to have smoked, touched her scarlet pursed lips to liquor and is "good to the folks." The legend goes she leaves the fetid closeness of her club each dawn to canter in the clean air of Central Park.

Yet if the prophets are correct Miss Guinan's star in the Broadway heavens is descending. The night club furore has spent itself, and she is to take off shortly to conduct a club elsewhere. Her popularity is almost solely New Yorkish. Hollywood once booed her.

* * *

There are many stories as to how much wealth Miss Guinan amassed in her reign as a rowdy night club queen. She is reported to have received a jousting in the market. For seasons she has made upward of $2,000 a week. Her chief extravagance is poker. She has lived in a modest brick house on Twelfth street for years. Her fortune is variously estimated from several hundred thousand to a tabloid million.

* * *

Peculiarly no one made a tremendous fortune sponsoring night clubs. Gil Boag, who was a former night club king and the most successful of all, did not retire with a particularly large fortune. "Protection money" blots up the big earnings.

* * *

* * *

The potion that packs the biggest headache these days in the Furious Forties is a brand of champagne featured in the speakeasies. It is a synthetic concoction that has the sparkling effervescence and tang of a vintage dating back to the year of the Comet. It has fooled the experts. But it's next morning results are terrible, producing among other things a mild fever.

WANTED—MORE MUSEUMS

By Archibald Henderson

Certainly one of the greatest needs of America is a large number of important museums having to do with science, invention, industry and commerce. To be sure there are museums in existence now; and others are in various stages of development. But in a country with a population of one-eighth of a billion, one cannot have too many museums.

One of the most important projects along this line, yet put forward in this country, is the museum to which Mr. Henry Ford is devoting so much attention. On one historic occasion Mr. Ford is reported to have said: History is bunk.

And surely much of the history of our texbooks is bunk—with its thinly veiled propaganda, its narrow nationalism, its restricted view, its stress upon wars, battles, generals; its slighting of science and the arts; its failure to give a true, broad picture of the life of the people as a whole.

Mr. Ford is building a colossal museum to show a typical community in all its relations; to trace the development of invention in the United States and incidentally elsewhere; to show the steady forward march of civilization, the upward climb of the race. Such an institution has an immortality of a sort. It is not a dead thing; it grows with the years and with the ages.

A museum enjoys an advantage over all other forms of passive instruction: it makes a direct, immediate and convincing appeal. The eye is instantaneous in reaction to external stimuli; and such impressions, with the majority of people, are far more deep-seated and lasting than impressions re-lectures.

The objects in a museum, in ceived from reading or hearing large measure, tell their own story. With the aid of the attached card, the exhibit is self-explanatory. The very fact of its presence in the museum is impressive. To pass through a museum, to co-ordinate your impressions, to carry away pictures in the imagination and ideas in the brain—this is an important sor of education which we, in this country, have neglected far too much.

One American was filled with ideas like this; and he did all that he could to forward his great plans. This was Benjamin Thompson, who was afterwards given the title "Count Rumford"—which he took, because he was born in Rumford, Mass. He founded the Royal Institute of Great Britain, and drew up a prospectus for the establishment of a great scientific museum under its auspices. Excerpts are as follows:

The completest working models or construction of the full size will be provided and exhibited in different parts of this public repository, of all such new mechanical inventions as are applicable to the common purposes of life.

Every consideration unites in showing how highly important it must be to the progress of real improvements to have some general collection of useful mechanical contrivances, constructed on the most approved principles and kept constantly in actual use, to which application can be made as to a standard, in order to determine whether the failure of experiments be owing to errors in principle, or to the mistakes of workmen employed in the construction, or to those of the servants instructed with the management of the machinery.

The Rhyming Optimist

By ALINE MICHAELIS

Ranch House

Strata of limestone, builded tier on tier
Through creeping ages, formed this barren hill;
A stunted, twisted cedar clinging here
The ranch house, rising from the hill's bleak crest,
Seems but an added heap of ancient stone,
Though quarried lately from the gray earth's breast,
It looks a part of nature's work alone.

Sheep bells atinkle cleave the quiet air
And suddenly the sterile hillsides wear

ONCE OVERS

By J. J. Mundy

Stored away in your attic you may have many articles that have been discarded after having been used a short time.

At some time they took your fancy and you believed them necessary to the general good of your family.

The amounts you have invested in this way from time to time would have purchased things of real and lasting value.

There are things that you would like to purchase at the present time that would be of practical and artistic use in your home.

But you cannot have them because of financial reasons

Too often you have been guided by fancy and not by sensible reasons in making your purchases.

You have followed your childhood inclinations in selection.

Scores of times you have invested unwisely to the end that your garret is stocked with unused, unsalable articles, just so much money thrown away.

Now that you are hard pressed in a monetary way, you can see that the situation might have been avoided if you had used good sense and thought in buying.

WORDS OF THE WISE

Small causes are sufficient to make a man uneasy, when great ones are not in the way; for want of a block he will stumble at a straw.—Swift.

As ceremony is the invention of wise men to keep fools at a distance so good breeding is an expedient to make fools and wise men equal.—Steele.

He is happy whose circumstances suit his temper; but he is more excellent who can suit his temper to any circumstances.—Hume.
